Camacho Pledges Defense Aid Amid Wild Inaugural Acclaim

Wallace Also Is Applauded With Fervor

Ceremony Devoid of Disturbance; 30,000 Are on Guard.

By the Associated Press.
MEXICO CITY, Dec. 1.—General Manuel Avila Camacho, a conservative who favors better relations with the United States, became president of Mexico today, and in an inaugural address in the presence of the United States Vice President-elect, Henry A. Wallace, pledged Mexico to her share in the defense of the Americas.

The inaugural ceremony took place in the chamber of deputies an hour before noon and was singularly devoid of disturbing occurrences, perhaps because some 30,000 soldiers, police and firemen, military cadets, armed peasants and militarized workers and public employees guarded the chamber and the national palace, in excellent humor.

Avila Camacho, a plump, agreeable man of 43, elected last July for a term of six years, was in excellent good humor as he promised his administration's respect for "all enterprises and investments." He called on labor to understand that greater national production is desired, and announced plans to create ministries of labor and marine, the latter to embrace both merchant and naval vessels.

He was warmly applauded when he declared that "nothing divides us in this America of our own," and pledged Mexico's adhesion to Pan-American doctrine.

The defense of America, he continued, is a common cause to all nations of the continent, no matter how weak or strong, and added that closer economic co-operation between the various western nations would give to the Americas an economic power which no one could break.

Wallace Cheered.
Wallace, special ambassador from the United States to the inauguration, entered the chamber of deputies with Ambassador Joseph Daniels and other representatives of the United States embassy and was enthusiastically applauded. They were, in fact, the only diplomatic group to be cheered.

The gathering applauded wildly again when President Lazaro Cardenas removed the tri-colored sash of the presidency and handed it to his successor and long-time political and personal friend.

In announcing his plan for a marine ministry, Avila Camacho said such a department would enable Mexico to respond better to the responsibility of defending her coasts and establishing her own naval bases.

WELCOME, JUDGE!—Earl Mann, Cracker president and a member of the executive committee of the minor leagues, is shown here welcoming Judge W. G. Bramham, of Durham, president of the minors, to Atlanta. Kennedy Offers Resignation as British Envoy

Will Continue To Serve
Until His Successor Is Chosen.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(UP) Joseph P. Kennedy tonight announced he has submitted his resignation as United States ambassador to Great Britain so that he may devote his time to "the greatest cause in the world today . . . to help the President keep the United States out of war."

He said he submitted his resignation to President Roosevelt on November 6, but that he had acceded to Mr. Roosevelt's wish that he continue to serve until his successor is chosen. Kennedy added, however, that he would not return to London as ambassador.

He announced his resignation after an unscheduled conference with the chief executive this morning.

In a statement distributed to newspaper offices, Kennedy said: "On November 6, I tendered to the President my resignation as his ambassador to the Court of St. James."

"Today the President was good enough to express regret over my decision, but to say that, not yet being prepared to appoint my successor, he wishes me to retain my designation as ambassador until he is. But I shall not return to London in that capacity."

"My plan is, after a short holiday, to devote my efforts to what seems to me the greatest cause in the world today, and means, if successful, the preservation of the American form of democracy. That cause is to help the President keep the United States out of war."

Kennedy's resignation had been anticipated generally. He flew back from London six weeks ago amid widespread rumors that he would resign immediately because he disagreed with the administration on foreign policy. He met these reports, however, with a nationally-broadcast speech urging Mr. Roosevelt's re-election.

Baseball Men Pouring in for Meeting Here

Originators of Night Play, Shaughnessy System Early Arrivals.

By JACK TROY,
Sports Editor.

Trade winds, which blow hot and cold, are beginning to whistle around the eaves of downtown hotels as the baseball magnates of the nation arrive in Atlanta for the annual meeting of the minor leagues.

Officially, the convention doesn't begin until Wednesday, but there were many distinguished visitors already on hand yesterday. Approximately 1,400 baseball men are expected.

Judge William G. Bramham, of Durham, president of the National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs—the minor leagues to you—held a meeting of the revision committee yesterday morning.

Meet With Judge.

Committee members meeting with Judge Bramham included Tom Fairweather, president of the Western Association; Elmer Daily, president of the Pennsylvania State League; Earl Mann, Atlanta president; E. M. Wilder, head of the South Atlantic League; and Charles H. Graham, president of the San Francisco Seals.

Heading the notables from the major leagues is Frankie Frisch, the former Fordham Flash. Frisch returned to baseball this past season as manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates. The Pirates will be in the market for players. President William E. Benswanger follows Frisch here with a ready bankroll. Alf Anderson, now a Pirate, is the leading shortstop candidate.

Lefty O'Doul, colorful manager of the Seals and former big league, accompanied Seals' President Graham to the meeting.

Frank Shaughnessy, president of the International League and originator of the play-off system which bears his name, was among the distinguished early arrivals. A former Southern leaguer, Shaughnessy played for a short time with Montgomery.

Lee Kysar, president of the Des Moines, Iowa, club and the originator of night baseball, arrived yesterday, too. Des Moines and Wichita played the first game under the arcs in 1929. The game opened the season and was attended by 12,000 fans in a park that seated only 3,800.

By Tomorrow at Latest.
The great majority of the minor and major league delegates will be in Atlanta by tomorrow at the latest. The Ansley hotel is convention headquarters, but the big stand-around baseball show, with its shrewd David Harbums, will occupy other lobbies as well. The Piedmont, across the street, will have a dozen baseball men for every potted plant.

Paul Richards, Cracker manager, first of the baseball men to arrive, was on hand with attentive ear as sessions began informally yesterday.

The great all-southern dinner is to be an outstanding event tomorrow night at the Piedmont Driving Club.

Meet KITTY FOYLE Today.

HOLLYWOOD CALLS—Georgia's most glamorous peaches turned out en masse last night at the Georgian Terrace hotel, seeking fame and fortune in Hollywood. And it was a photographer's holiday. Those chosen by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer scouts will be given screen tests. The one making the best test will be named "Miss Anniversary" and be the guest of Miss Vivien Leigh at the birthday world premiere of "Gone With the Wind" on December 12. Left to right above, Pat Carlisle, who last night won a screen test, and Rubby Love Johnson.

Screen Tests Are Awarded To 11 Beauties

Peaches Seek Fame, Fortune, Role of 'Miss Anniversary.'

Eleven beautiful Georgia peaches, seeking fame and fortune in Hollywood, last night were awarded Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer screen tests.

Chosen from a field of 168 at a five-hour audition at the Georgian Terrace hotel, they now compete for the role of "Miss Anniversary," to be the guest of Vivien Leigh at the birthday premiere of "Gone With the Wind" on December 12.

The girls announced at 12:15 o'clock this morning for screen tests are:

Louella Louise Stone, of 686 Longwood drive; Betty Shepard, of Ellis road, Griffin, Ga.; Gloria Vee Swanson, of 10 Cherokee road; Glenna Hogan, of 18 Peachtree circle; Carolyn Williams, of Roswell road, Dunwoody, Ga.; Martha Sims, of 846 North avenue; Edna Bunn, of Highland fall road, Griffin, Ga.; Alice Richbough, of 509 Manford road; Jane Osburn, of 58 Peachtree Memorial drive; Raeford Ragsdale, of 3195 Habersham road, and Pat Carlisle, of Atlanta.

The 11 lucky ones will meet at the hotel at 2 o'clock this afternoon to begin rehearsal of the parts from "Gone With the Wind" they will enact before a camera.

They will be coached in dialogue by Miss Susan Myrick, technical advisor to David O. Selznick during the filming of "Gone With the Wind," to whom was entrusted the task of giving Vivien Leigh a real southern dialect.

All will be made up for the camera by Bernard J. McConnell, one of Hollywood's most famous make-up artists. J. Edward Carrier, M.-G.-M. eastern test director, will have charge of the tests, with Charles David manipulating the camera and Steve Jones in charge of sound.

After nearly a week of rehearsals, they will appear before the camera Friday.

All of the tests will be forwarded to the Metro studios in Culver City for the scrutiny of the west coast executives.

The one making the best test, in addition to being named "Miss Anniversary," will also be given an all-expense trip to Hollywood.

Something More Than Money Given 10 Opportunity Families

Self-Reliance Is Built for Persons Who Need Help To Become Self-Supporting, Survey of Persons Aided by 1940 Fund Shows.

By FRANK DRAKE.

The record made this year by Ten Opportunity families deserves consideration and examination, Atlantans.

Forty families presented as Opportunities by The Constitution were adopted last Christmas but during the year so many became independent that a total of 82 families were helped with the funds donated to aid the original 40.

That is a splendid record and it reflects credit in wholesale lots upon the sturdy American men and women who needed only a helping hand to overcome their difficulties and be self-supporting. But, how did they do it? Was it dollars alone that brought them back from the brink of being permanent relief clients, or was it something else? As important as the money is, you realize that other things figured in this rehabilitation.

Opportunity families, such as you will read about soon every day in The Constitution, are families desperately in need of money but they all have other burdens, other problems and difficulties to overcome.

Opportunity families have been buffeted by fate until many of them are ready, almost, to give up and sink. Almost, but not quite. It is a spark of hope, still burning, which is fanned and kept alive and made to grow that saves them.

Encouraging that single spark, stiffening the backbones of men and women who are tired out by death, helping them see their way into the clear, making plans for the future—that is the job of the trained workers of the Family Welfare Society, which co-operates with The Constitution in presenting the Ten Opportunities each year.

It is their duty—and they have performed it well as attested by the excellent record of the 1940 Opportunity families—to counsel with the families your money is helping. They see that the money you give is spent wisely, but in a way which builds self-reliance.

Always, Opportunity families are encouraged, sympathetically, toward self-reliance. To put it bluntly, self-pity can wreck a family's chance for independence. Self-pity has kept many a man down, when he could have won out by looking objectively at his problems. So, these experienced workers discourage self-pity, encourage self-reliance. That is part of the answer how so many 1940 Opportunity families became independent in less than one short year.

This service by the workers of the Family Welfare Society goes with the money you give to Ten Opportunity families. There is no cost of administration of the Opportunity fund. Every cent you contribute at Christmas time goes to the family you want to help and none of it is used for any type of "overhead."

However, without the money you gave, families that could be saved will not be. Mothers who could support their families will not be able to earn a living. Fathers who are injured, or sick, may die while they watch their children suffer from lack of food. Children who want to learn may have to stop school. Endless tragedy will result—without the Opportunity fund.

So, plan right this minute to give something this year to the Opportunity families. Want to help them and send along as much as you can afford to assure a chance to worthwhile, needy mothers and fathers. You won't regret it. The families you help will make you proud you did.

Hugh H. Trotti, vice president and business manager of The Constitution, is treasurer of the Ten Opportunity fund. He will see that every cent you donate goes to the family you want to help!

General Booth Holds Audience Spellbound With Stirring Talk

By KEN TURNER.

General Evangeline Booth, guiding genius behind the far-flung activities of the Salvation Army, who has been termed "the ablest woman in the world," demonstrated that ability yesterday to a crowd of more than 3,500 Atlantans who jammed their way into the Paramount theater and overflowed to the auditorium of the Wesley Memorial church, where they listened to the address over a speaker system.

Speaking in a clear-cut voice—despite her more than 70 years—the ageless leader of Salvationists, brought a message so dynamic and so sincere that Major Clark Howell, editor and publisher of The Constitution, who had been invited to respond to her talk, tore up his prepared speech and devoted

Greeks Seize 7,000 Fleeing Fascist Troops

Antonescu Warns Hungary on Return of Transylvania.

By the United Press.

Greek forces, hurling back Italian troops along "the entire front" in Albania, were reported today to have captured 7,000 additional Fascist soldiers and left an even higher number of dead and wounded on the battlefields as they seized strong positions for new assaults.

Dispatches from the front placed the Greek vanguard barely 45 miles from the Albanian capital, Tirana, and Greek military spokesmen said the Italians were in retreat from the sea to the Yugoslav border, across snowy mountain passes, with the Greeks in "tenacious pursuit."

On another Balkan front diplomats in Budapest heard that the chief of the German supreme command, General Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, has been sent to Rumania, ostensibly to crush internal disorders that have spread bloodshed across the Balkan nation.

Hungarian newspapers, in Bucharest dispatches, reported the slaying of two more prominent Rumanian political leaders, former Premier Ion Gligurdu and Georges Bratianu, but direct inquiries in Bucharest failed to provide confirmation of the reports.

Another disturbing development in Rumania yesterday was Premier General Ion Antonescu's warning to Hungary that Rumania is determined to regain the Transylvanian territory stripped from her by an Italo-German award last August.

The Greeks were reported pressing hard after the Italians, who were doing their utmost to take advantage of the rain and fog to cover their movements and attempt a counter-attack through mist-hidden ravines.

Hand-to-Hand Fighting.
Italian commanders were said to be rushing reinforcements into mountain positions north of Pogradec on Lake Ochrida in an effort to stem the Greek drive which has opened up the main road to Tirana in the direction of Elbasan.

The Greek commander was said to be using small units of soldiers who are good hand-to-hand fighters in the mountainous regions where the Italians are unable to use mechanized forces or massed manpower.

The Greek high command told of "important progress" all along the front from the Ionian seacoast to Lake Ochrida on the Yugoslav border.

The Greeks were said to have been successful again in storming

Atlantans May Watch Screen Tests' Shooting

National Authority To Demonstrate and Lecture on Make-Up.

Atlantans who have always wanted to see movies made will be permitted to watch the actual shooting of screen tests Friday, Saturday and Sunday from which "Miss Anniversary" will be selected to preside at the first birthday premiere of "Gone With the Wind" December 12, E. B. Coleman, M-G-M official, announced last night.

A small admission charge will be made and the proceeds will go to the British War Relief Fund, of which Mrs. James D. Robinson Sr. is chairman in Atlanta.

Bernard J. McConnell, nationally famous makeup artist, will demonstrate and lecture on the art of makeup as he prepares the Atlanta girls for their screen tests each day, Coleman said.

Screen tests will be made at 2:30 o'clock Friday and Saturday and at 8 o'clock Sunday night in the Palm Room of the Georgian Terrace.

The girl who makes the best screen test in the judgment of the camera crew here will be given the title of "Miss Anniversary," get her picture in the newsreels, be the guest of Vivien Leigh at the premiere and later get a free trip to Hollywood as the guest of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Selznick International Studios. Screen tests of all the girls selected last night for tests will be sent special delivery to Culver City, Cal., for directors of M-G-M to see.

LOVELY LADIES—Frances Butt, left, and Jane Osburn awaited anxiously the talent scout's decision on screen tests. Miss Osburn was chosen. She was a member of the 1939-40 Debutantes' Club. The girl making the best screen test will be named "Miss Anniversary," to be the guest of honor at the anniversary world premiere of "Gone with the Wind."

F.D.R. Believed Planning Trip To Caribbean

White House Refuses To Reveal Where He Is Going.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(AP)—Though the White House remained silent on his plans, there were indications tonight that President Roosevelt would leave tomorrow for a trip to the Caribbean.

All Secretary Stephen Early would say about it was that "you will have to continue to speculate on where the President is going." Unofficial word was that Mr. Roosevelt would embark at some southern port for a cruise combining rest and a tour of inspection of defense works in the vicinity of Puerto Rico. Some American naval bases being established on British West Indies possessions also may be included in the itinerary.

It was believed the chief executive would be away from Washington about 15 days.

The fact that the navy and marines will be holding practice operations around Culebra island, between Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, in the next 10 days, led some of the President's associates to believe he might look in on these.

All Mr. Roosevelt has had to say about his trip plans is that if he finds he has to hurry back and is too far to make it in 12 hours by rail and water he will use a plane. He has not flown since he became President.

The President indicated that he would be away until the week starting December 15 in a letter declining "with much regret" an invitation to the traditional dinner December 14 of the Gridiron Club, organization of Washington newspaper men.

It will be the first gridiron dinner Mr. Roosevelt has missed since he took office and the first time a President of the United States has been absent from the affair since President Coolidge was compelled to decline an invitation at the time his son died.

3 Marine Generals Given Promotions

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(AP)—The Navy tonight announced Presidential approval of the selection of three brigadier generals of the Marine Corps to become major generals, 20 Naval captains to become rear admirals and 106 commanders to become captains.

The promotions, to become effective soon, will bring the number of rear admirals in the expanding navy to 110. The Marine Corps now has three major generals and nine brigadier generals, including the three slated for promotion.

These three are Brigadier General Clayton B. Vogel, of Washington, commander of the Second Marine Brigade at San Diego, Cal.; Brigadier General Holland M. Smith, of Montgomery, Ala., commander of the First Brigade at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba; and Brigadier General Charles F. B. Price, of Wayne, Pa., member of the Naval Examining Board here.

George Sees Higher Taxes On Incomes

Says Corporation Levy Rate of 30 Per Cent Is Possible.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(AP)—Senator George, of Georgia, ranking Democratic member of the Senate Finance Committee, expressed the view today that the corporation income tax rate might be boosted as high as 30 per cent before the national defense program is paid for.

The present rate is 24 per cent on corporations with annual incomes of $25,000 or more. Smaller corporations pay lower taxes.

George added that higher taxes on individual incomes also were very much in the picture for the future. He emphasized that he was thinking in long-range terms and had no idea whether any tax increases were in store for business at the next session of Congress.

Congressional fiscal leaders said after a conference with President Roosevelt Friday night that no further retroactive taxes on 1940 incomes were contemplated. They left the impression, however, that increases could be expected on 1941 incomes, both corporate and individual.

Increasing the corporation tax rate to 27 1-2 or 30 per cent, George said, possibly might harm business to some extent. He added, however, that there appeared to be no alternative.

The senator advocated amortizing defense borrowing over a period of years—possibly 20—with provision for raising enough taxes to meet current expenditures and to make yearly payments on this debt.

This was in line with a general policy goal reported to have been fixed at the Friday night White House conference.

Some such plan is expected to be advanced in Congress early next session, if the Treasury recommends an increase in the present $49,000,000,000 debt limitation. Secretary Morgenthau has said that he would like to see this raised to about $65,000,000,000.

Italians Claim Plane That Shoots Through Air

ROME, Dec. 1.—(AP)—Italy's air force either has adopted or is ready to introduce a new type of plane, the Italian press indicated today, and the Turin newspaper Gazzetta de Popolo said it would "bring a revolution" in air fighting.

Il Popolo di Roma described it as a motorless, propellerless craft, shot through the air by gas.

Increasing the corporation tax rate to 27 1-2 or 30 per cent, George said, possibly might harm business to some extent. He added, however, that there appeared

U. S. Studying General Booth Latest British, Makes Stirring Nazi Weapons Address Here

Officers Bring Back Data To Help Perfect Defense.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(AP)—High-ranking Army and Air Corps officers who recently returned from London brought back data on a number of new British and German weapons, it was learned today, to guide this country in perfecting its defenses against air attack.

Major General Barton K. Yount, commander of the newly created Southeast Air District, and Brigadier General E. Chaney, head of the Air Defense command, described the results of their special mission in recent talks to groups of officers at the War Department, but most of the information was carefully withheld from the public.

No Explanation.

Officers who heard them said, however, that the discussions contained no explanation of the mysterious bluish light ray reported by London observers in the last few days and mentioned as a possible new weapon being used by the British against German night bombers.

The ray, described as narrower than the ordinary searchlight beam, was seen at elevations of 10,000 feet and 20,000 feet. Unlike the familiar beam from ground searchlights, which stab upwards, the strange new light was horizontal in the sky. In some quarters, it was suggested the horizontal beam was designed to help pilots of night fighter planes detect the whereabouts of German bombers by illuminating them as they crossed the path of the beam.

British censors have passed stories concerning Blenheim bomber planes, which the Royal Air Force has converted into fighters, equipped with "an ear" for the interception of night raiders.

Because sound travels relatively slowly, the report aroused conjecture here as to whether the British were experimenting with a device for planes similar to that on which the United States Army is working as a substitute for the old type sound detectors. Details of this American device are a carefully guarded secret.

"Protection against night bombing is one of Britain's major problems," one Army spokesman said, "and undoubtedly many weapons will be tried."

Nazi Innovation.

About the only German innovation which American observers returning from London reported was a parachute bomb. It was described as a particularly powerful explosive which detonates about 10 seconds after reaching the ground and which is capable of leveling a whole block. Some sources suggested it was lowered by parachute to prevent it from burying itself in the earth and thus decreasing its demolition potentiality.

The observations made by Generals Yount and Chaney of the technique and tactics of modern aerial warfare are expected to influence this country's defense plans.

As commander of the Southeast Air District, with headquarters at Tampa, Fla., Yount will have charge of fighter squadrons charged with responsibility for repelling any air attack from the Caribbean area.

to the great growth of the Salvation Army. "There is no sorrow that heaven can't heal," she added, "and that singleness of purpose is the one great reason why a 'ring around a London lamp-post' expanded around the world."

She explained that at her father's first meetings, he gathered around him his few followers beneath a fog-swept lamp-post in the dismal slums of London.

As she traced the history of the organization, she stressed the troubles and the bitterness that developed over the street meetings with the band concerts of religious hymns. She told how they were persecuted, thrown in jail and oft-times nearly starved because they would not give way before their persecutors.

In this connection, she told of how as a girl of 20 she had pleaded before a bar of justice and won freedom for herself and 25 other band members who had been lodged in jail for playing on the street.

She said spread of the organization was "the wildest dream of the wildest dreamer materialized." As she finished her talk, she was given a thunderous ovation that lasted several minutes. Then stepping back to the center of the stage and holding a large bouquet of yellow roses, she threw kisses to the audience.

Major Howell, opening his remarks with a toast "May God bless you and keep you," spoke in glowing terms of General Booth's sincerity of purpose and her sense of humor.

General Booth was introduced by Governor Rivers.

The occasion of General Booth's coming to Atlanta was the golden anniversary of the establishment of the Salvation Army in Atlanta. Salvationists from 15 southern states and the district of Columbia are attending the observance.

Other speakers at the celebration yesterday were: Preston Arkwright, who presided; Dr. Louie D. Newton, Colonel Richard F. Strout, chief secretary of the Army; Lieutenant Commissioner William C. Arnold, southern territorial commander, and W. E. Mitchell.

The Emory Glee Club and the Army's golden jubilee band provided music.

General Booth will remain in the city through tomorrow for conferences with leaders of the organization.

Wallace Lauds 'Sentiments' of Mexican Chief

Strikingly Similar To Those of Roosevelt, He Declares.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 1.—(AP)—United States Vice President-elect Henry A. Wallace in a broadcast to the United States today declared he was "in complete agreement" with the "lofty sentiments of Pan-American solidarity" expressed by Mexico's new president, General Manuel Avila Camacho, in his inaugural address.

The broadcast was made from the United States embassy.

"To me the outstanding point he (Avila Camacho) made was his strong statement on behalf of Pan-Americanism," Wallace said. "Apparently he believed that the various differences which may exist between the various nations of this hemisphere can be subordinated to the doctrine of peaceful co-operation."

President Camacho's statement regarding hemispheric solidarity was "one of the strongest which has been made by any Mexican statesman," Wallace declared, and said the new president "appears to vision a strengthening of the economic power of the hemisphere, and a day when the whole hemisphere shall co-operate economically so as to be able to meet any challenge which might come from the old world."

"These sentiments, as expressed by President Avila Camacho, bear striking similarity to the sentiments of our own President Roosevelt, who has so often talked to our people about the good-neighbor policy, and about the solidarity of the nations of the western hemisphere."

"And so I find myself in complete agreement with these lofty sentiments of Pan-American solidarity which the new president of Mexico has so well expressed."

No Business Can Stand Still

"HINDSIGHT AND FORESIGHT" a weekly column by Holgar J. Johnson President Institute of Life Insurance

NO business—however well-run—is good enough to stand still. This applies especially to life insurance. Our business has a fine record of public service; but it has also a clear-cut social obligation which dictates that it can never stand on its record. It must progress.

This progress depends upon efforts in many directions—among others upon research. Not all research has been for the purpose of producing material things. It involves also analyses of markets, the search for improved methods of distribution and better service.

It is this kind of research—dealing with the human side—that helps life insurance do a better job. For the past 20 years, the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau, supported by the insurance companies, has been conducting research which has improved distribution methods and raised the service standards of the agent.

Now, there's a new step forward. The companies have just established the S. S. Huebner Foundation at the University of Pennsylvania. Named for a celebrated scholar who has devoted his life to the teaching of insurance subjects, it will promote new research in life insurance and at the same time develop more trained teachers of life insurance for American colleges and universities.

Thus life insurance recognizes again its social obligations to find better ways to conduct its business in the public interest. It recognizes the fact that the millions of policyholders who own life insurance have a great stake in the business; therefore, it cannot stand still.

This regular Monday column is provided by the Institute of Life Insurance to permit its President to speak to American policy owners. Address inquiries to the Institute at 60 East 42nd St., New York City.

RIDING THE CIRCUIT ALL OVER GEORGIA

BY THOS. M. ELLIOTT

Busy Week for Preachers.

One hundred and thirty-four of the preachers in the North Georgia Methodist Conference will be over their heads in work this week, for that's the number who are to trek from the old pointment to a new one, as instructed by the recent annual conference session. The ministers themselves delivered their farewell sermons yesterday.

It's a big job for 134 preachers to move, and also quite expensive. It costs this time an average of at least $15 per man to move. Multiply 134 by 15, and the sum amounts up to more than $2,000. Methodist ministers pay their own moving expenses, with very rare exceptions.

Pastors in this Conference making the longest moves are the Rev. C. Pierce Harris, who comes to Atlanta from Jacksonville, and Dr. J. C. Pattey, who comes to Madison from the Western Virginia Conference. The Rev. G. W. Hamilton, of Atlanta, has the shortest move of all, moving only a few blocks, from Oakland City to Sylvan Hills.

Methodist Union Functions.

Georgia Methodists now have had the opportunity to observe the workings of Methodist unification for one full year, and form conclusions as to future prospects. In so far as I have been able to learn, there has been no instance of any discord this year. The first steps in completing the union have been taken, and congregations of the three Methodist bodies are merging without friction or loss of momentum.

The two sessions of the Georgia annual conference held in November have been declared among the very best in the history of Methodism in the state. Attendance during the Atlanta Conference was by far the largest I have known in the 36 years of my membership.

Bishop Moore's Impact.

There is a general expectancy all over Georgia that Bishop Arthur J. Moore's coming to direct Georgia Methodism's activities will prove not only a highly satisfactory but spiritually invigorating to every section and church. Reaching the state last June, he began immediately to make plans for a person-to-person contact with every minister before annual conferences should convene. In 18 district rallies of at least one day each he thus came into touch with every man, and heard first-hand information regarding each man's particular charge.

Then, just prior to conference session, he met for three days with the district superintendents, and discussed in detail the situation and needs of each charge and each man. Probably no presiding bishop ever before had a clearer understanding of the field than does Bishop Moore.

Outstanding among the bishop's characteristics is his ardent evangelistic urge, and his exhortation that Georgia Methodism should take up the sag in its world-service interest and contribution. Bishop Moore believes Georgia Methodism needs a spiritual revival, and he says he plans to wear himself out in working toward that accomplishment. He deplores the sag in the church's support of the world-service program.

Podunk Folk Dismayed.

At conference on Sunday was an amazed group representing the Podunk circuit. People of that five-point circuit had heard that laymen could talk with the bishop and district superintendents about their preacher, so they came planning to see about a new preacher. Podunk circuit of five churches pays the pastor $211.35.

The district superintendent assured them they would have a new pastor, and they wanted to know all about him and his family. Right there is where their high hopes began to go down like Republican hopes did along about midnight on last November 5.

Said the superintendent to them: "Your new pastor is above 60 years of age, six feet and four inches tall, bald-headed, wears false teeth, has never been known to preach less than 55 minutes, and has a voice that can be heard a mile. His wife is red-headed, buck-toothed, tongue-tied, pigeon-toed, and blind in one eye. Furthermore, your new pastor has four old maid daughters, the youngest of whom will never again see her twenty-fifth summer, to say nothing of the twenty-fifth winter, is freckle-faced and squint-eyed."

"Dadgummit," said the Podunk delegation leader, "I wish we had stayed at home, and kept our mouths shut; for we are in a worse fix now than ever before."

Equalizing Salaries.

A recommendation adopted by the conference seeks to equalize salaries to the extent that no unmarried man shall receive less than $700 per year, a married man $900, and a man with children $1,100. The conference adopted the suggestion that all ministers pay 1 per cent of their salaries received from a common fund, and that all churches pay 2 per cent of amounts they pay their pastors into the fund, which is to be used to help salaries of underpaid ministers up to the minimum set forth. Dr. W. H. LaPrade, of Rome, says this proposal, if perfected, will bring into a common fund the sum of $13,000 each year.

Women's Work Praised.

Bishop Moore said during conference that one of the most significant works observed in Georgia this year is that among the women of the church. During recent weeks, the entire setup of the women's work has been reorganized, renamed, and newly inspired. Under the name of Women's Division of Christian Service the 550 auxiliaries in the north Georgia section, with their 23,913 members, contributed the sum of $136,774 from all sources for all purposes. Mrs. L. M. Awtrey, of Acworth, is president of the conference organization.

Flying 'Fort' Grounded Here By Weather

Huge Bomber Scheduled To Take Off This Morning.

Unfavorable flying conditions yesterday kept the Army's huge four-motored bomber—a B-17 type—grounded at Candler Field, although a hop-off to Tampa had been planned.

The big ship arrived here Saturday from Hamilton Field, Cal., on what was described by its officers as "a navigation check flight."

Captain T. W. Steed is pilot and commander of the ship. Candler airfield officials said it is now planned to take off for Tampa sometime this morning, but the exact hour has not been set.

From McMill Field, Tampa, the bomber will be flown across the Gulf of Mexico to Brownsville or Kelly Field, Texas, and then back to California.

Census Bureau Tabulates Final 1940 Figures

Probable Apportionment of Congressional Seats Computed.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(P)—The Census Bureau tabulated the final 1940 census figures today and computed the probable apportionment of congressional seats for the next decade.

The results will be reported to the President tomorrow and are expected to be made public by the White House soon thereafter. Meanwhile, the census officials declined all predictions and tips on the figures.

It was learned, however, that the revised total of the April 1 population of the 48 states and the District of Columbia was slightly higher than the 131,409,881 preliminary estimate issued by the bureau about two months ago.

On Capitol Hill, the apportionment figures were awaited for their possible effect on the future careers of individual congressmen. Reapportionment on the basis of the present 435-seat size of the house and the mathematical formula used in 1930—the procedure so far favored by congress—may switch a number of seats.

On the basis of preliminary figures, which are not expected to change much, California appeared to have won two more seats than the 29 she now holds. Other indicated gains were: Arizona, from one seat to two seats; Florida, from five to six; New Mexico, from one to two; North Carolina, from 11 to 12; Oregon, from three to four, and Tennessee, from nine to 10.

The indicated losers of seats were: Illinois, from 27 to 26; Indiana, from 12 to 11; Kansas, from seven to six; Massachusetts, from 15 to 14; Nebraska, from five to four; Ohio, from 24 to 23; Oklahoma, from nine to eight, and Pennsylvania, from 34 to 33.

ACCOUNTANTS TO MEET.

A special meeting of the directors of the National Association of Cost Accountants will be held at 7 o'clock tomorrow night at the Athletic Club.

Arnall Pays Elks Tribute At Ceremony

Memorial Service Held for Members Who Died in Past Year.

It is deeds and not shafts of marble that "are the true monuments of the great," Attorney General Ellis Arnall last night told Atlanta Elks in memorial service in tribute to brothers who died the past year.

He addressed the Buckhead and Decatur Lodge No. 78 in the annual service, paying tribute to those who have entered "the open door through which we pass to life again."

To seek the monuments of departed Elks, he observed, "you must seek out the crippled children who have been treated and trained... the sick who have been cured... the worthy young men and women who have been educated... look into the homes, the faces, even the hearts of all who were poverty stricken, sick or depressed and to whom our great order has extended a helping hand."

He said this day itself, when Elks throughout the nation assembled in commemorative service, is a monument to brothers no longer in the living ranks.

"Today then," he added, "should be a day on which to examine ourselves; on which to determine whether we are worthy of the sacred trust imparted to us, a day of high resolves, a day on which to renew our solemn oaths and pledge ourselves again to the matchless principles of our organization. To charity, justice, brotherly love, fidelity, and patriotism."

CLUB TO MEET.

The monthly meeting of the Burns Club of Atlanta will be held at 7:15 o'clock Wednesday night at the Burns cottage, 988 Alloway place.

Bases in Uruguay

There will be no objection, in this country, with the attitude taken by the chamber of deputies of Uruguay in regard to proposed construction of air and naval bases, with the co-operation of the United States, in Uruguayan territory and for the joint defense of the western hemisphere.

The deputies ratified the government policy in conducting discussions of intercontinental defense with the United States, but specified that any bases as proposed in Uruguay should be under complete control and supervision of that country.

That is entirely proper. If, in the plans for hemisphere defense, it should be deemed advisable that bases for the use of Uruguayan planes be built on territories belonging to the United States, we should naturally insist on this country retaining control and supervision.

Only by thorough understanding between all American nations can the plan for co-ordinated hemisphere defense be effectively worked out. There must be no slightest danger of this country assuming any other attitude than that of co-operation between equals. Naturally, because of the greater wealth and greater resources of the United States this country will have to assume the greater expense of construction for the program. But, by the same argument, this country has greater wealth to protect and thus it is only fair she should carry the largest burden of cost.

But there is no intention, on the part of this country, of infringing upon the rights of any other and the condition specified by the Uruguayan deputies is but the same policy this nation would naturally follow.

It is hoped the meek understand clearly that they will inherit the earth with no apology for the condition it is in.

Books for Children

It is doubtful if there is any realm of literature which has shown so great improvement, such changes in style and subject matter, as that of books for children. Even a casual survey of the offerings in the juvenile sections of the book stores and book departments, at this holiday season of the year, will verify that statement.

Juvenile books of today are filled with light, beauty, music, gaiety, adventure. They can bring nothing but pleasure to those who read and no parent, or child psychologist, need fear undesirable effect upon the young mind through such reading.

It is not so many years ago since so-called books for children were enough to give anyone with imagination, juvenile or adult, the heebie-jeebies. Tomes of ponderous content, written for children only to the extent the author had confined himself to words of not more than two syllables, depicted, as desirable models for life, despicable little prigs who were always going around moralizing and intoning copybook maxims to their elders.

It was the general theme that the most desirable life plan for an infant was to leave this world of sin as early as possible, so as to be assured of retaining that innocence which would qualify them for life in a better world.

Horrible examples of what happened to little boys who did not trim their finger nails, who would not allow the cutting of their hair or who failed to wash behind the ears were depicted in word and picture fit to cause nightmares for weeks. Even that most famous of childhood prayers, "Now I lay me—", is, on careful inspection, an apprehensive sort of thing, conducive more to child fear than child peace of mind.

Probably the new age in child books began with Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland." Carroll has had a host of followers in the years since, and today there are thousands of volumes of equal fantasy and delight, and equal harmlessness.

It is strange to record that the generation which approved such things as "Spiritual Milk for Boston Babes," and "The Six Giants," should have considered "Cinderella" as depicting "some of the worst passions that can enter the human breast."

We should be grateful that the dark ages in literature offered for child minds to read have passed and, at last, we have entered an age of intelligent joy and lightness.

With a musical setting, perhaps the Duce's Albanian drive could be worked up into grand opera, as the boys have their rubber daggers.

Bombs and Chinaware

One thousand-pound high explosive bomb could, one would believe, smash an awful lot of chinaware. And, from some of the stories which come from England, there is an impression that such bombs are falling promiscuously, like giant hallstones, just about everywhere in the tight little isle.

It is, therefore, somewhat surprising and at the same time reassuring to discover that imports of English-made chinaware, at the port of New York, have increased a lot since the war began. In September, 1939, the first month of the war, the figure was $65,372. And in September, 1940, that total had mounted to $90,130.

Importers of the fragile stuff say about the only difference they see, since the war began, is that it comes in bigger bunches, now, and less frequently. That is the result of the convoy system. Whereas it used to be that a cargo of chinaware would unload about every ten days, now three shiploads will arrive in one week and then there'll be two or three weeks without any.

Interesting, too, is the information that the prosaic British manufacturer has, in one respect at least, been stirred out of his age-old customs. The crates and baskets in which the china is shipped used to be stenciled, simply, "Country of Origin: England." Now they bear such slogans as "England Delivers the Goods"; "Delivered, Thanks to the British Navy"; "Britania Still Rules the Waves"; "Delivered, God Bless the Navy"; etc., etc.

And it must not be forgotten that every additional container of chinaware, or any other British product, sold to this country, adds just so much to Britain's credits for the purchase of planes and ships and shells and other munitions of war, over here.

An astrologer says his charts now give Britain the advantage, but the Axis' case is not yet hopeless. Hitler may carry the phrenologists.

Are Judges People?

Wonders never cease in this land of constant surprises, but even the most callous must view with alarm the action of that soul-hardened New York magistrate who took advantage of his power to become too uppity with a lovely lass of 23 and recommended for her "a good old-fashioned strapping."

Now in this age of chaos and revolution, when the old gods tremble and the solidities of conduct on which we so hopefully cling are quivering beneath us, we must keep some things sacred for our souls. Not the least of our sacred traditions is that the sight of a pair of shapely legs, thrust artfully before the eyes of jury and of judge, is to be considered sufficient grounds for the dismissal of any suit against any girl in any court. On this legal point many an aspiring young lawyer has risen to fame; there might be quibblings on legal technicalities, but on this bed-rock of law a young barrister felt secure to take his stand forever.

And now, drunk with power, a judge has shaken our faith again in the sacred custom of the courts. Where is this nation going if a pretty woman is to be sentenced to the workhouse simply for nagging a husband, and an ex-husband at that? The people who elected this man had faith in his adherence to the traditions of democracy. Little did they know that a few swats on the noodle from a loving wife would, in court, outweigh the sight of pretty dimples, a bewitching smile, and a traffic-stopping torso. Impeachments should be got under way immediately.

Whither has justice flown?

Editorial Symposium

AN ERA ENDS IN JAPAN

News items: Death comes to Prince Kimmochi Saionji, last of Japan's elder statesmen. Admiral Kishisaburo Nomura is named Ambassador to the United States. The Japanese Army continues "strategic withdrawals" in China.

All are subjects of editorials in the nation's newspapers.

Recalling that "Prince Saionji's life spanned the whole era from the arrival of Admiral Perry's 'black fleet' and the fall of the shogunate to the emergence of Japan as a world power," the NEW YORK TIMES feels "he left his nation a legacy of wisdom it may once again find precious." The WASHINGTON POST adds the thought that "Saionji... lived not a lifetime, but an era. Now the world Saionji built in Japan has almost crumbled away... his Japan going, there was nothing to do but die when he saw coming a 'new structure' which was so old that only he in Japan recognized its antiquity." And the CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER believes "History may record—waiting on the outcome of Japan's adventures in Asia—that Saionji's life ran parallel with the rise and fall of modern Japan. He was in his day a great statesman. He died a tired, old Japanese."

While Admiral Nomura's "real environment is that of naval command, not of Washington drawing rooms," his appointment "appears on the surface, as a move in the direction of improved Japanese-American relations," and he may "make the ideal ambassador," says the MEMPHIS COMMERCIAL APPEAL, which also advances the thought that Japan may believe he "is qualified to serve her best in an informative capacity." And the BOSTON TRANSCRIPT likens his appointment to other "superficial inconsistencies" which are distinguishing the diplomacy of "our troublous times from the statecraft of tradition," adding: "Why should not Japan follow her recent anti-American grumbling with the designation of a moderate to represent her in America?"

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

ALL IN THE WAY IT'S SAID WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 1. Lord Lothian's abrupt way of raising the question of financing the British war effort has found little favor with the powers that be. The State and Treasury Departments and the White House appear to feel that when the British ambassador stepped off the Clipper to announce his country would soon need American aid in cash, he was purposely avoiding advance consultation with the proper authorities here. They are proportionally angry.

The tempest now raging behind the scenes of the administration is hardly more, however, than a teapot typhoon. For while Lord Lothian may have spoken out of turn, there is no complaint against the emissary of the British treasury who will soon arrive in Washington to take up formally the same question informally raised by the British ambassador.

This man, it is understood, comes at the invitation of Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr., who dislikes the stiff modes of ordinary diplomatic intercourse, and always prefers friendly conference with a negotiator directly accredited to him. Every sign suggests he will be given a kindly reception and a fair hearing. Thus the annoyance at Lord Lothian boils down to annoyance that the problem was not handled as the administration wanted it handled. It is understandable, but not overwhelmingly significant.

This is not to say that the emissary of the British treasury will find it easy to extract financial assistance from this country. On the contrary, he will have to surmount serious difficulties and alter tenacious prejudices. Lord Lothian's statement on leaving the Clipper was only the last of several overtures for credit, and all of them seem to have been made in such a way as to create doubt and suspicion here.

HE WENT TOO FAST During the early stages of the war, at the time of the repeal of the arms embargo, the Anglo-French purchasing commission was directly under the Treasury's wing. Arthur Purvis, the commission's able director, was wise enough to confine himself to the main task of placing his armament orders. Unhappily, one of the British officials working with him took a different line. Appalled by the extent of the expenditures contemplated in the purchasing commission program, he was unable to resist an occasional hint that if the British war effort were to continue, America would eventually have to give financial aid.

As this official was a member of the British embassy staff, he started with a disadvantage at the Treasury, where there is a marked distaste for diplomats. He spoke at a time when there was little evidence that the British government was willing to pour the whole national energy into the war effort. And he seems, finally, to have shown a want of tact, dropping his hints persistently despite very visible evidence that they were not welcome. At length Secretary Morgenthau's patience wore so thin that he pretty sharply forbade the matter ever to be mentioned in his presence again, until the British could show tangible proof of the approaching exhaustion of their resources. He added that the British had no reasons for complaint while they could still place orders and pay for deliveries here.

Meanwhile, the administration attitude had inevitably crystallized. Because of the surrounding circumstances, the hints which so annoyed the Treasury were taken as indications of an intention to hornswoggle this country. This doubt, which was originally aroused, not only at the Treasury, but also at the White House and the State Department. Because such feelings existed in high quarters, statistical arguments against giving financial aid to Britain were sought and found, in schedules of potential British assets far more optimistic than any agreed to by the British treasury.

DOUBT, SUSPICION Nor was the incident of the hinting official the last of the sort. During the rest of the winter and the spring, all was calm on the credit front. But in the summer, after the British war effort had begun in desperate earnest, persons connected with the British embassy again became concerned over their country's ability to pay for its vast purchases here. Being concerned, they discussed the problem, and although they avoided mentioning it to anyone at the Treasury, reports of these discussions were not long in reaching Treasury ears. Doubt and suspicion flared up again immediately.

Finally, this fall, the British government became so concerned over the outlook for the war, that the administration was notified the question of financing must be taken up, at the latest, in a couple of months' time. The expedition of the British treasury emissary was arranged on receipt of this notification. American officials, forgetting their suspicion and doubt, prepared to hear the British treasury's case with reasonable calm. On balance it is probably unfortunate that the calm was shattered when Lord Lothian made the issue public before the administration was ready to do so.

The Eighth was the Eighth Scottish, from the Sefton park section, where the wealthier people lived. And it became the fashionable thing to do for the youth of the well-to-do to join the Eighth Scottish. Scarcely a kilted uniform in the entire outfit, from rear rank private up, that wasn't tailor-made and they made a colorful and beautiful show when on parade.

And these boys from sheltered, cultured homes proved as good soldiers as the tough lads from Scotland road, and a great rivalry sprang up between the two regiments.

It didn't matter what records any other regiment made, if either of these two could beat the other at the rifle range, in drill, or on the march, in athletic contests, or in any of the forms of rivalry that man devises, the men of that regiment were happy. Almost always they stood one and two in regimental rankings, and sometimes it was the two wanky kilties from Sefton park who stood one, and sometimes it would be the hard-bitten lads from Scotland road.

And, beneath the rivalry, the two regiments developed a tremendous respect for each other. They still fought, on every opportunity, and a few would have guessed, from their utter attitude, that they were anything but deadly foes.

But I did hear that, during World War No. 1, when they wanted picked men for that heroic affair on the mole of Zeebrugge, they chose the Fifth Irish and the Eighth Scottish of Liverpool, and loaded 'em on Mersey ferry ferries and sent 'em around, through the Irish sea and the channel, to do the job. And that they were better fighters, side by side, than 'most any other regiments of them all.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Thursday, December 2, 1915:

"Augusta, Ga., Dec. 1.—A mistrial was ordered in federal court here tonight in the case of Thomas E. Watson, of Thomson, Ga., charged with having sent obscene matter through the mails. The jury reported it could not agree on a verdict."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Tuesday, December 2, 1860:

"The rumor of the sale of The New York World to George W. Childs and Banker Drexel was denied as soon as it was published. Perhaps The World had better remain in the hands of its present owner. There is only one Joseph Pulitzer."

'Hitler' Mule Banished

The city veterinary at Springs, South Africa, has ruled that "Hitler," a perfectly sound mule, must be sold because it has proved utterly intractable. "Under the circumstances," writes the official in his report, "it would be unreasonable to retain him in place of an animal of more use."

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

(The views expressed here are Mr. Pegler's own.)

Learned

With Regret

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—I was saying that until about two years ago I was heartily but unintelligently in favor of labor unions and that now I have reservations.

I have learned with regret that the union has developed the aspect of a mob in some of its relations with the community and needs to be brought under the same legal discipline that governs most of us and should control us all. This would benefit the rank and file members as well as non-union workers and the rest of society. If unions were held responsible for misdoing, they could not reasonably complain unless it be argued that a mob has rights of lawlessness. After all, what is a mob but a private association of individuals?

Cannot imagine the members of the Union League Club pouring out of their premises to surround a factory and beat up New York policemen as the electricians did recently, but I know that if they should do so, our little mayor would cause the degradation or dismissal of any cop who failed to bring down his quota with firm, accurate strokes of his blackjack. The political reaction of our city government to the mob violence of the electricians was quite different, however, and the reason was that unions possess political and physical power. This power grows in width and depth and vigor as the mob in question calls to its aid unions with which it has collective treaties.

Dictator

Plan

The union also has the aspect of the underworld or Capone type of gang in its relation to its members, to non-members and to employers. Members need not be consulted on issues affecting their right to retain for their own use money which they have earned.

The musicians, for instance, are wholly in the power of one man, Jimmy Petrillo, who admits that he is a dictator but claims to be a good one. No dictator is good, but even a good one would necessarily be un-American or anti-American. The union exceeds its legitimate reason for being when it attempts to coerce its members in their political decisions, but this was done flagrantly in the recent campaign by two unions which claim to be models of propriety, honesty and enlightened administration. These were Sidney Hill, who was clothing workers and Dave Dubinsky's garment workers.

But you don't want me to go into fine detail about the many points on which the union stands between the citizen and his rights or the community and the community's rights.

However, I want to emphasize my contention that neither the AFL nor the CIO nor any subdivision of either organization has any more legal right to violate laws or persecute citizens than the Ku Klux Klan had. When it is argued that persecutions or other abuses are as nothing compared with the good of the larger number the argument skews itself on the bayonet which defends the legal rights of minorities in our kind of country.

Sub-Governments

Governments

Our unions have become sub-governments under the protection of our public government, but they do not even acknowledge a duty to obey our laws. Unlike public governments, many of them do not even pretend to account for their money or to hold free elections, and this failure, I think, has gone so far as to require compulsion from the government. I do not say that all unions are lawless, but I notice that those which are well-conducted resent the slightest suggestion that they should be checked up. In other words, they resist the right to fudge.

Nor do I agree to compulsory collective bargaining. I uphold the right to bargain collectively, but insist that the right to bargain individually is equally precious. Or, to put it better, I endorse collective bargaining for those who want to bargain collectively, which is as far as the law goes, although unions and the Labor Board have forced many Americans to bargain thus who didn't want to. This was done by forcing them to join unions against their will.

Now, does all this show a bias against labor or unions as such? Many union leaders insist that it does, but they are not unbiased themselves, and anyone who reads the labor press objectively will be sure to admit that it is very unfair in its discussions of power and opinions in disagreement with the union position. I am sorry to have to say that the union leaders as a whole have failed to meet the requirements of character, intelligence, citizenship and honesty which the community has the power that they have enjoyed. Because the restraints are almost negligible their position calls for unusually fine character, but on the average their leaders have been no better than our minor and more paltry politicians.

But let us be of good cheer, because we are not getting results out of our great skill, plant, resources and wealth, and war draws higher. If it comes all discussion of minute constitutional rights will become academic and historical, and all of us will damn well pitch in and do as we are told.

Eire Peat Output High.

Eire's production of peat this year is 50,000 tons compared with 17,000 tons last year. The Turf Development Board recently conducted a tour into the Clonsast Bog to show coal distributors of Dublin and other cities what had been accomplished. They traveled 10 miles by railway over ground upon which it was impossible to walk four years ago. At intervals of 100 feet, the bog is drained by a huge area with 350 miles of drains, some 10 feet wide and 12 feet deep. Today the bog's capacity of 120,000 tons a year for 30 years has been opened completely down to its depth of 15 feet.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL

WALLACE IN MEXICO In The Constitution of Sunday there was a wirephoto from Mexico showing a wirephoto of Henry Wallace, vice president-elect of the United States, talking with a Mexican family in front of their thatched hut at the town of Tamazunchale.

Those who have driven from Laredo to Mexico City, down the international highway, know Tamazunchale. It is at the very foot of the great mountain chain which one must traverse. Time was when it was an isolated Indian village requiring several days' journey by pack train to reach. Now the cars drive through it and there is a movie, of sorts, and gasoline stations and restaurants. It is warm there. The Mexican who owns the theater lives with his family, in part of the theater and a few goats may wander in to see the show.

Many dignitaries have passed through Tamazunchale. There have been movie dignitaries and many of America's tourists whose names were headlines.

But of all of them, I imagine Henry Wallace is the very first one to be able to stop and talk with the people in their own language.

That is very important. It means that for the first time in the history of the highway, an American bigwig could stop at one of the grass-thatched huts and talk with the Indians. He ceased to be just another face in a passing automobile for the Indians to stand and stare at as it rolled by or halted for gas. Henry Wallace is, to the people of Mexico, a human being and not just a stuffed shirt whose words a translator gives them.

MAYBE NOT A BLUNDER For a time it seemed that the sending of Wallace to Mexico was a diplomatic blunder. It permitted all the anti-American elements to renew their propaganda about the imperialism of the "Colossus of the North"—meaning your Uncle Sam.

There had been an election in Mexico, Juan Almazan, popular military commander of northern Mexico, claimed he was elected but that the administration candidate, Manuel Comacho, had been named president by falsifying the returns.

It may be true. No one can be sure. Mexico's election laws are archaic and make for trouble. For instance, the first persons to reach an election box on the morning of election, are in charge of that polling place for the day. This alone makes for riots, stuffing of the box and for trouble.

It is true that Almazan was popular. It probably is true, as claimed, that he did have the backing of certain American interests. But he was popular in his own right with a good record of military service.

It may be true that Comacho won the election as his supporters claim. No one ever will know for sure about that election. But Comacho was declared the president-elect. And the Almazanites attempted a revolt. This was put down very effectively by the Mexican government. The people did not rally as had been expected. The truth is, Mexico slowly but surely is coming of age and is outgrowing revolutions.

Almazan nursed a hope, as did his followers, the United States would not recognize Comacho. This would have assisted their plan of revolution.

ANTI-U. S. AGITATION When his election was recognized, went into action. Many of them are not at all interested in Almazan. This is important to remember. They are German-financed or Italian-financed. They are interested only in keeping Mexico in a state of agitation and trouble so that this country cannot focus its attention on Europe. The same thing is going on in some sections of South America.

This is not difficult to do. Many of us, when we go traveling, are an insufferable people. We do not make good impressions, especially in countries where the rate of exchange is in our favor and we treat their currency with contempt. They cannot visit us because the rate is against them. And when we visit them we are not good neighbors. There are many who do not like or admire us.

At any rate, the recognition of Comacho touched them off. They organized demonstrations against "Yankee Imperialism." They put on a demonstration in front of the American embassy but it was put down. With too much ease to make it appear as a real demonstration. It was intended for publicity purposes.

Wallace will talk in Mexico. He can talk in Spanish. They will hear Wallace, not an interpreter. They will hear their own tongue being spoken by a man who is next to the top in the Yankee government. He will say, in Spanish, with his own inflections, that this country wants to be friends in a real and practical way.

I imagine it will have an effect. It may not be a blunder at all. It may turn out to be the best move we could have made. Because Wallace is a friendly, shy sort of person, genuinely and deeply interested in people. He is not a brusque tourist. It might be a great idea to keep Henry Wallace down there and let him stop and talk in the little villages; let him ask about crops and about their children. That's the sort of diplomacy we've never had. Wallace is the first American, of high office, who could talk to them. It is important.

Some day we will begin to teach Spanish, not in high school or college, but in our grade schools. It is time we, too, came of age about such things.

Minor League Chiefs Arrive, Begin Warmups for Convention

O'Brien Steals Show in Finale Of Grid Career

Redskins Win, But Little Davey Completes 33 Passes for Record.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—(UP) The Washington Redskins clinched the eastern division championship of the National Professional Football League today with a 13-to-6 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles but the visitors' little Davey O'Brien stole the show in his last and greatest game.

The 151-pound Texas mite filled the air with passes for the Eagles to establish a new league record with 33 completions, 10 more than the previous mark set by the Redskins' "Slingshot" Sammy Baugh earlier this season. One of his heaves accounted for Philadelphia's only score and climaxed a 98-yard drive in the final period.

The crowd of 25,838 gave O'Brien one of the greatest ovations ever heard in Griffith stadium when he left the field with but one minute of the game remaining.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—(AP) The Chicago Bears, a great team when the pressure was on, won the western division championship of the National Professional Football League today, defeating the Chicago Cardinals, 31 to 23, before 13,902 shivering fans at Wrigley Field.

maining. His outstanding performance in his final game—he enters the Federal Bureau of Investigation as a G-man within a few days—earned him a niche in football's Hall of Fame.

TO FACE BEARS. The Redskins next Sunday meet the Chicago Bears for the pro-league title. The Bears, who fell before the Washington team here two weeks ago by a 7-3 score, took the western division title today by downing the Chicago Cardinals, 31 to 0.

O'Brien, former star of Texas Christian University, shared part of the day's glory with two other former players of that school—Baugh and Don Looney, Eagles' end, who caught Davey's passes in college days. Baugh and Looney each established two league records, but Davey's passing over-

Don Hutson Wins Pro Scoring Title

CLEVELAND, Dec. 1.—(AP) Don Hutson, veteran Green Bay end, nosed out Johnny Drake, Cleveland fullback, for the individual scoring title of the National Professional Football League by scoring seven points today in the Packer-Ram game here.

Unofficial figures give Hutson, former Alabama star, 57 points on seven touchdowns and 15 added points. Drake, who prepped at Purdue, finished the season with nine touchdowns and two added points for 56.

shadowed all else on the gridiron. His 33 completions, made in a record 60 attempts, were good for 312 yards. None of his passing attempts was intercepted, a unique accomplishment in itself.

Baugh's quick-kick in the last quarter carried for a net gain of 85 yards from scrimmage, surpassing the previous league mark of 82 yards set by Ace Parker, of Brooklyn. The kick placed the ball on the Eagles' 2-yard line, from where O'Brien began his magnificent drive. By completing five out of seven passes, Baugh boosted his total completions for the season to 111, five more than the former mark held by Parker Hall, of Cleveland.

CATCHES 14. Looney was on the receiving end of 14 of O'Brien's passes to surpass by six the number of aerials caught in any one game. The completions brought his season's total to 58, a new all-time high.

The Redskins took a 6-to-0 lead in the second period when Wilbur Moore sprinted 27 yards for a touchdown at the end of a 56-yard march sparked by Bob Seymour. Sandy Sanford's attempted placement was wide.

Baugh placed the Redskins in scoring position in the third period with passes to Ed Justice. Justice then raced 29 yards to the Eagles' seven-yard line and Dick Todd carried it over for the touchdown. Bob Masterson kicked the extra point.

Frank Emmons, Eagles' end, took a 14-yard pass from O'Brien while standing in the end zone to score Philadelphia's lone tally. Fran Murray's try for the extra point was blocked.

The Redskins gained 36 yards on Baugh's passes and 220 yards by rushing. The Eagles had 316 yards passing, all by O'Brien, but made a net gain of only 16 yards by rushing.

EL PASO, Texas, Dec. 1.—(AP) The Sun Bowl athletic committee today invited Western Reserve University of Cleveland to play in the Sun Bowl football game against Temple Teachers of Arizona, January 1.

Red Hot

Someone said, just before the end of the Tech-Georgia game—"Sinkwich must still be running a temperature today because he's red hot."

Both Tech and Georgia have had heroic football figures during the season. Captain Hawk Cavette got up out of a sick bed to play a game against Alabama.

Flying Frankie Sinkwich ignored the flu bugs to lead Georgia on to victory Saturday at Athens.

The will to win is a remarkable thing. A boy is either born with it or he doesn't have it. As the game went Saturday before 28,000 thoroughly thrilled Tech and Georgia partisans, there can be no doubt that it was correctly termed a toss-up in advance.

Those who gave the margin to Georgia in a one-sided manner simply were made to look foolish in the final analysis. Either team might have won, as the game went, and not nearly enough has been said in praise of Leo (The Lion-Hearted) Costa, the one-play hero of the Red and Black.

Costa's placement kicking provided the winning points, just as surely as did the sparkplug performance of Frankie Sinkwich create the needed touchdowns in a tremendous comeback performance.

Georgia continued to give away at least a touchdown a game, and Coach Wally Butts is hopeful that this charitable attitude on the part of his Bulldogs will end with the current season.

Georgia players and coaches had high praise not only for Ralph Plaster, a heroic back, but Little Tom Thumb Bosch as well.

Bosch can take punishment about as well as any little man who ever played the game. You never saw anybody any cooler under fire, either.

Real Compliment As complimentary as anything else to Sophomore Sinkwich's skill is the fact that Georgia Tech used just about every defense known to the game in an effort to stop him.

He was a marked man. And still, in 28 tries, he gained 128 yards.

And in all he only lost seven yards. Teams seldom trap him back of the line in scrimmage.

It was duly noted that Sinkwich variously ran against five, six, seven and eight-man lines. It seemed as if Georgia Tech were shifting in to every defense except the one made famous years ago by a local sports writer.

This was the "7-2-2-1 defense." Naturally the rules make no provision for a 12th man.

Georgia's passing went rather well, at times, when the Jackets were lined up to stop running plays particularly.

But the Jackets, of course, outpassed Georgia and will finish the season with a better passing record, perhaps. At least the Techs will have gained more ground through the air.

It is probable that on percentage of completions Georgia still ranks about second in the nation. The Bulldogs were second only to Cornell going into Saturday's game.

He Who Hesitates The Rose Bowl people now know that it doesn't pay to keep the country's eligible football teams hanging on the phone.

Used to be the Rose Bowl people had the country at large by the nose. Everybody wanted to go to the Rose Bowl. The R. B. could dictate, could make 'em all wait.

It's different now.

Boston College and Tennessee demonstrated that by accepting Sugar Bowl bids before Stanford had finished playing California in the final game on the coast Saturday.

The only two unbeaten and untied major teams in the country thus have made it possible for the folks who flock to New Orleans to see the greatest game of New Year's day.

No matter who unbeaten Stanford obtains it still will be a team that has lost a game. And the same holds true of Mississippi State's opponent in the Orange Bowl at Miami.

They'll play a real national championship game at New Orleans—best of the east arrayed against Dixie's finest.

And the crowd won't be far short of the crowd which sees the Tournament of Roses game at Pasadena. They can now seat almost 80,000 in the Sugar Bowl stadium. Seldom do more than 90,000 pack the Rose Bowl stadium.

Moguls Arrive The great Minor league convention of baseball, which doesn't officially open until Wednesday, unofficially got under way yesterday when the revision committee of the National Association went into session.

With the exception of popular George (Red) Trautman, whose wife passed away several days ago, the committee was complete. Judge W. G. Bramham, head man of the Minors, presided. Members present included Earl Mann, Cracker president; Dr. E. M. Wilder, Sally league president; Elmer M. Daily, president of the Pennsylvania State Association, and Tom Fairweather, president of the Western Association.

The Minor league convention is a great one. Members arrive on Sunday to get ready to swing into action on the following Wednesday.

It is a fact, too, that many a baseball man who had a poor financial season always manages to scrape up enough funds to attend the big bunion derby.

By nightfall the majority of the Minor delegates and the Major league representatives will have picked themselves out a spot in the Ansley lobby to carry on their long-range standing and talking sessions.

Jud Bailey, popular Associated Press writer from New York, headed the arrival of well-known writers. Jud stopped over in Durham Saturday to see Duke and Pitt play and came in on the same train with Judge Bramham yesterday. High Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis is due Tuesday.

Mississippi State's Contract With Orange Bowl Is Ironclad

"Mississippi State's contract to appear as one of the principals in the Orange Bowl game at Miami New Year's is definite and not provisional," Jack Baldwin, president of the Orange Bowl, emphatically stated here last night.

Baldwin's statement answered a report from Starkville, Miss., home of the unbeaten Maroons, that State was still holding out for a Rose Bowl bid and had taken no official action on the Orange Bowl invitation, according to President G. D. Humphrey. (Nebraska later was invited and accepted the Rose Bowl bid. See Page 1.)

Baldwin presented a contract signed by Allyn McKenn and C. R. Noble, State coach and athletic director, calling for the Maroons' appearance in the Miami classic January 1, stipulating the financial arrangements.

Texas Aggies Are 1st Choice For Miami Go

Texas Entry Prefers Orange to Cotton Bowl Is Report.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 1.—(AP)—The Orange Bowl appeared on the verge today of discarding its traditional North-South feature in favor of bringing the Texas Aggies here to play Mississippi State in the annual New Year's Day football game.

Shortly after the once-tied Mississippi State eleven was signed last night, Will M. Preston, Orange Bowl schedule chairman, disclosed for the first time that the Aggies were being considered as an opponent.

Preston said Georgetown, La-Fayette and Penn State were also on the list of prospects, but informed sources here virtually were certain the Texas Aggies had the inside track.

The Cotton Bowl had announced previously that the Southwest Conference would be polled to determine an opponent for Fordham in Dallas. Miami sources had it on good authority, however, that big John Kimbrough and his mates considered playing in Dallas like "just going around the corner" and would prefer a trip to new territory. The Aggies played in the Sugar Bowl last January 1.

Purples Flash Form in Drills For Miami Tiff

Doyal Cheered as Team Prepares To Leave on Tuesday.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS. The roar of the Purple Hurricane as it whips down the field in scrimmage these days is music to the listening ear of Shorty Doyal.

The Boys' High mentor, whose eleven goes to Miami to take on Miami High Thursday night, is as happy as a kid in a pet shop over the way his charges were clicking in scrimmage of Wednesday, Thursday and Friday last week.

"They seem to be at their peak again," enthuses Shorty, "and if they can hold the keenness they showed last week, we should be able to give the Stingers plenty of trouble."

The unbeaten Florida state champions drubbed Edison High of Miami last week, and Bill Brannin, who was scouting Jess Yarbrough's team for Doyal writes that the sunshine boys really have another tough club, and the Purples will have to be at peak form to take them over the hurdles.

The G. I. A. A. champs are especially anxious to thump Miami this year to give Shorty his fourth unbeaten Boys' High eleven to celebrate his twentieth year of coaching high schoolers in Atlanta. (He has directed the destinies of the Purples for 16 years now). Too, the Stingers smashed the Atlanta eleven unmercifully last year to take a 4-to-3 edge in the series between the two teams. So deep-seated revenge is ranking in the stout breasts of the Purple Brigade.

Doyal is in high spirits and one of the reasons is the return to form of Alfred Berman, full back who missed the late season games after an appendectomy. He had hoped to use Berman for a quarter or so, but the talented plunger has proved so fit and rugged in the scrimmages, Shorty believes he may be able to go the route of necessary Carroll, a fine tackle who has been out, too, is rounding into shape nicely, also.

The Georgia titlists will entrain around 9 o'clock tomorrow morning for Jacksonville, where they will work out Wednesday.

GOLFERS ARRIVE: MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 1.—(AP)—Martin Pose and Eduardo Blasi, Argentine golfers who will add an international flavor to the $10,000 Miami open December 12, arrived here today to get in their practice ticks.

By GRANTLAND RICE.

Looking Backward—And Forward.

Some 35 years ago your correspondent operated as referee or umpire more than once in the general vicinity of a halfback and fullback by the name of John J. Tigert, of Vanderbilt.

Tigert, 6 feet 3, 190, was one of the best backs of his day. No one loved football more, and his main delight was ripping a line wide open with catapultic charges.

For a great many years the same John J. Tigert has been president of the University of Florida. He has been one of our leading educators. But he still loves football.

For the past few seasons Dr. Tigert has had to inspect a rather dreary scene, insofar as his team was concerned. This season, we are glad to report, his surroundings have been more pleasant.

Under the direction of Tom Lieb, Knute Rockne's first lieutenant when Rock was sick, Florida has started back. After a spotty opening the Gators suddenly gave Tennessee a stiff fight and then came with a rush down the stretch, taking Georgia Tech and Georgia in their stride up to the Auburn game.

Lieb faced a tangled situation when he struck Gainesville, but it is different now. His Florida team still has Texas left this next Saturday, and Texas might as well be on the lookout for trouble.

It is, at least, pleasant to know that Dr. John J. Tigert, after many weary years in the wilderness of defeat, has at last arrived at the rose-bordered rim of the promised land.

The Off-Trail Again.

Not that Rice University is on any off-trail. But Rice has a coach who hasn't received his just recognition. His name is Jess Neely, one of Vanderbilt's best quarterbacks.

Neely was Clemson's coach before leaving for Rice and I recall a year ago that Wallace Wade of Duke named him as one of the best coaches in the country. Neely was the coach who developed Banks McFadden and he was also the coach who beat Boston College in the Cotton Bowl game last New Year's Day. This Boston defeat was a hard shock for Pop Warner who said then that B. C. was the best football team in America.

Neely has turned in a great job at Rice. His team has beaten L. S. U., 23 to 0; Texas, 13 to 0; T. C. U., Arkansas and others. By next fall you can figure Rice among the topflight teams of the nation.

Most Scholarly Athlete.

"Who is the best scholar playing football this fall?" asks Sideliner. "That should mean something."

We have no set figures, but our guess would be George Kerr, the brilliant guard at Boston College. It is no secret to state that Frank Leahy rates Kerr the ablest man on his Boston team. In addition to that he is a brilliant Greek and Latin student, of which there are extremely few today. Kerr's scholastic rating would certainly match that of any football player on any other team, and far surpass the records made by most who are not football players.

There is certainly no finer character in football from coast to coast. No pro football for Kerr, where he would be a star. For him the priesthood.

Calling the Turn.

"I'd like to make one football prediction," Matty Bell, of Southern Methodist, remarked at Pittsburgh in early October. "That prediction is that no team in the Southwestern Conference is going through unbeaten. Everybody will lose at least one game."

M. in this list? I asked the Texas coach.

"Sure," he said. "They have a great team. But someone will knock them down—Rice, Southern Methodist or Texas. After all, Texas A. and M. isn't the only good team in that section. There are several others who are a match for anybody."

Matty Bell certainly called the turn. Dana Bible had his Texans adjusted physically and mentally for this uprising, proving again the uncertainty of this football whirlpool.

Shaughnessy, Playoff Founder, Played in Southern in 1905

Frank, Here for Baseball Convention, Was Member of Montgomery Team; Molesworth Also Played in the Outfield.

By JACK TROY.

The man who conceived the play-off which bears his name, the Shaughnessy, is in town attending the baseball convention of the Minor leagues.

Frank Joseph Shaughnessy, president of the International league, is no stranger to the south. In fact, Mr. Shaughnessy once had a "coffee stop" in the Southern league. He played briefly with Montgomery in 1905.

As an outfield companion at Montgomery, Mr. Shaughnessy had Carlton Molesworth, a Cub scout, Molesworth, who'll be here for the meeting, had a most inauspicious major league debut as a pitcher with Washington in 1905. The Phillies tagged him for 14 runs in six innings, winning, 21 to 9.

Many leagues use the Shaughnessy system, devised by Frank Shaughnessy. Right now the Texas league is fighting the system in its present form. The team finishing first in the regular season doesn't win the pennant in Texas. The play-off winner cops the flag.

It's different in the Southern. The regular season winner is awarded the pennant, and the play-off winner meets the Texas champion in the Dixie Series.

Mr. Shaughnessy was not perturbed over the Texas situation. "They're not paying me anything for using the play-off system. I'm not involved," he said.

Here, by the way, is the box score of the first game played by Frank Shaughnessy in the Southern league. Montgomery played Little Rock that May (18) day in 1905:

Frisch Is First In Parade of Major Pilots

Judge Landis Due To Reach Scene of Meet Tuesday.

By JOHN MARTIN. Before the ink dried on the dying punts and passes of football yesterday, baseball magnates, managers and even the misfits went into the bullpen and began warming up here for the 39th annual convention of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues.

Early arrivals barged into the lobby of the Ansley hotel yesterday and the preliminary wind-ups opened with the meeting of the executive committee, which is preparing to demand a loud voice in the naming of the next commissioner—when and if there is a successor to the white-haired Kenesaw Mountain Landis.

Judge Landis is scheduled to join the proceedings tomorrow afternoon.

Although the nation's largest diamond carnival does not officially open until Wednesday, over 100 names of the minors' social register were on the Sabbath docket.

HOSTS IN ACTION. Earl Mann and Paul Richards, of the Crackers; Major Trammell Scott, Southern League president, and Dr. E. M. Wilder, Sally League chief, were forced into the role of hosts two days ahead of schedule and were doing a nine-inning job in the first of a round-robin series that promises to produce everything from player deals to revision of policies controlling the relationships between the majors and minors. New leagues likewise were in the offing, even in the face of the potential draft that could claim over 4,000 professional ball players.

This is booked as a minor league get-together, but every major league club will be represented, and don't be surprised to see the guests that comb Peachtree street turn into a succession of trade winds. In fact, before the stove was fired yesterday a report was whispered that Jimmy Wilson already had bought Whitey Moore, the one-time Vol, from the Reds.

And Larry Gilbert blew in from Nashville ready to sell Baron Poffenberger. Gilbert likewise was searching for a catcher to replace Greek George, conditional graduate, to the Cubs. Paul Richards, winter resident of Waxahachie, Texas, is looking for a shortstop and is certain to get on the trail of a pitcher or two.

BUSY. Frank Frisch was the first major league manager to disembark in quest of new talent for Pittsburgh. Boss Benschwanger was right behind him, reportedly with a roll of loosely tied folding money.

The three bigwigs of the Brooklyn Dodgers, President Larry McPhail, Manager Leo Durocher and Coach Charlie Dressen, put in a noisy appearance last night and immediately announced they would trade anything, including the Brooklyn bridge.

Lefty O'Doul also was a first-nighter around the trading table, willing to buy and sell. The Yankees overpowered the other clubs with a team that included George Weiss, head farm man; Johnny Nee, Johnny Neun, Paul Krichell and Ray Kennedy.

Judge Bramham, minor league czar, was among the early vanguard and before his first meal had rolled up his sleeves for action, presiding at the unofficial session which dusted off the plate for a look at what the lower leagues will do about the rules governing their submission to the jurisdiction of Commissioner Landis.

This is the major issue of the whole convention.

ENGEL INVASION. Things were quiet on opening day, but Joe (Bankrupt Barnum) Engel will be here today and that

It's different in the Southern. The regular season winner is awarded the pennant, and the play-off winner meets the Texas champion in the Dixie Series.

Mr. Shaughnessy was not perturbed over the Texas situation. "They're not paying me anything for using the play-off system. I'm not involved," he said.

Here, by the way, is the box score of the first game played by Frank Shaughnessy in the Southern league. Montgomery played Little Rock that May (18) day in 1905:

Judge Bramham, minor league czar, was among the early van-guard and before his first meal had rolled up his sleeves for action, presiding at the unofficial session which dusted off the platters for a look at what the lower leagues will do about the rules governing their submission to the

Sugar Bowl Claims Choice Game, With Vols and Eagles Signed

Orleans Gets Only Meeting Of Unbeaten

Boston College Squad Plans To Train at Bay St. Louis, Miss.

By MORTIMER KREEGER.
NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 1.—(AP)—Critical New Orleans football fans seemed agreed today that their Sugar Bowl had obtained the best possible game for New Year's Day by matching Boston College and Tennessee.

"They got the best team in the east and the best in the south—that more could you want?" was the fan's way of summing up the general consensus.

"They're the only unbeaten, undefeated teams except Stanford, which was to play in the Rose Bowl, and Minnesota, which won't play in any bowl," another pointed out. Stanford will play once-beaten Nebraska in the Rose Bowl. See page 1.

During the season Texas A. & M., which beat Tulane in the Bowl here last January 1, was the first choice of the sports writers and the public for a return engagement, with Tennessee second and Boston College third. Since the Aggies' defeat by Texas the other two have moved up into the first two positions.

BEST PROMISED.
"We promised the best game in the country and we have it," said President A. N. Goldberg of the New Orleans Midwinter Sports Association.

The Southeastern Conference seemed about to send another generous quota of members to bowl games. Shortly after Mississippi State licked Alabama 13-0 at Tuscaloosa, ending its schedule unbeaten and tied only by Auburn, it was announced the Maroons had accepted an invitation to play in the Orange Bowl at Miami.

The opponent was not named. Last season the conference's three co-champions all went to bowls—Tennessee to the Rose, Tulane to the Sugar and Georgia Tech to the Orange.

Three other old feuds were settled yesterday in the Southeastern, as Louisiana State upset Tulane, 14 to 0, Georgia beat Georgia Tech, 21 to 9, and Auburn took Florida, 29 to 7.

It was announced in Boston that the football squad of 43 players with coaches and a corps of Boston newspapermen, would arrive December 20 at Bay St. Louis, Miss., about 65 miles east of here, to train at St. Stanislaus College for the Sugar Bowl tilt. No definite decision on the invitation to Mississippi State's opponent was considered likely before late tomorrow or Tuesday.

Since its inauguration in 1933, the Orange Bowl has featured a southern team against the best possible "northern" opponent. The game was founded more for the publicity to this winter resort area than anything else, and it was felt one team should be selected from a section most likely to send tourists to Miami.

In the last year or so, however, the trend has been toward giving the crowd its money's worth with the best possible game, regardless of where the teams originated. The Orange Bowl has been practically assured of a sellout of its 34,000 seats even before the teams were named.

The University of Miami played in the first three Orange Bowl games, beating Manhattan 7 to 0, and then losing to Duquesne, 33 to 7, and Bucknell, 26 to 0.

In 1936 Catholic University of Washington formally opened the new stadium with a corking 20-19 victory over the University of Mississippi.

DUQUESNE WON.
Duquesne came back to nose out Mississippi State, 13-12, in 1937. Auburn downed Michigan State, 6-0, in 1938. Tennessee walloped Oklahoma, 17-0, in 1939, and Georgia Tech trimmed Missouri, 21-7, last New Year's Day.

Mississippi State, led by Harvey Johnson and Charley Yancey, climaxed a brilliant 1940 season yesterday by crushing Alabama, 13-0. Allyn McKeen's Maroons were tied by Auburn, 7-7, but included Florida, Louisiana State and Ole Miss among nine victims.

The Texas Aggies, assured of a tie for the Southwest Conference title, lost their finale to Texas after bowling over eight other teams.

Of the other prospects, Georgetown lost only one game, 19-18, to Boston College, LaFayette was unbeaten and untied, and Penn State had its record marred by a loss to Pittsburgh and a tie with Syracuse.

Orange Blossom Foes Are Selected

ORLANDO, Fla., Dec. 1.—(AP)—Wilberforce University of Ohio and Florida A. & M.'s Rattlers will clash here December 7 in the Orange Blossom game, annual affair played each year between two of the nation's top-ranking Negro collegiate football teams.

City Commissioner Colin Murpherson, a member of the Orlando Intercollegiate Committee, which is sponsoring the event, announced that plans were being made for additional bleacher seats.

Atlanta Winner In Florida Race
DELAND, Fla., Dec. 1.—(AP)—Lloyd Seay, of Atlanta, today won the feature event in the annual Volusia county stock car race at the De Land fairgrounds, driving 49 laps through heavy dust on a rough half-mile track in 73.30 minutes.

TECH'S FIRST TOUCHDOWN—Bobby Beers, Jacket wingback, took the ball on a reverse from Johnny Bosch in the first quarter and went three yards for Tech's initial touchdown. No. 18 is Tech's Ralph Plaster watching the successful effort. The score came after a long march by Tech after receiving the opening kick-off. It gave Tech a lead of 7-0.

Weightlifters Will Vie Here Next Saturday

With more than twenty weightlifters entered, the Georgia State A. A. U. Weight-Lifting Championships to be held at the Atlanta "Y" next Saturday looks to be the biggest state weight-lifting championships ever held in Georgia. A novice division is being held this year for the first time, giving the lifters who have never won a medal before a chance to get into the winning class.

There will be six bodyweight classes held in both the novice and open division, the 123, 132, 148, 165, 181 and heavyweight classes. The lifts to be contested are the three Olympic lifts, namely the two hands military press, the two hands snatch and the two hands clean and jerk.

Entries received to date are as follows:

means acceleration in every corner. The Lookouts are on the block, according to reports from Chattanooga, and this show likely will settle their status before the week is over.

Among the figures here was Father Harold J. Martin, president of the Canadian-American League. He is the only clergyman executive in professional baseball.

Among the other early arrivals were: Frank Shaughnessy, originator of the play-offs; John Holland, president of the Oklahoma City club; Jimmy Humphries, business manager of the same outfit; George Schepps, Dallas president; Alvin Gardner, Texas League president; Walter Morris, business manager of Fort Worth; Milton Price, Texas League secretary; Elmer Daily, promotional director of the association and president of the Middle Atlantic League; and Ray Ryan, president of the East Texas League.

Davidson, Deacons Sever Relations

RALEIGH, N. C., Dec. 1.—(AP) Davidson dropped Wake Forest in football; now Wake Forest has dropped Davidson in all other sports.

Rumor that Wake Forest had made a clean break and severed all athletic relations with the Wildcats was circulated in Wilmington yesterday after the Davidson vs. the Citadel football game. The rumor was confirmed tonight at Wake Forest.

Davidson is expected to announce its basketball schedule early this week—and Wake Forest will be conspicuous by its absence.

Kimsey's Smart Signal-Calling Gave Georgia Her Third Score

Bulldogs Tried Same Aerial-Play Which Failed on Preceding Down To Go Over From Four-Yard Mark.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.
Georgia's quarterbacking may or may not deserve all the criticism it has received this season but there was one particular piece of signal-calling against Tech Saturday that was a master stroke.

It was a daring play. It smacked of the direction of "Take-A-Chance" Charley Treadaway, who gained quite a reputation several years ago throwing passes from behind his own goal line.

Truck Kimsey, the lad who called this particular play Saturday, is a bit more conservative than Treadaway was. But one could almost believe Charley was in there.

Here was the situation. Georgia was leading, 14 to 13. Frankie Sinkwich and Kimsey had driven the ball to the Tech four, where it was first down and goal to go. Sinkwich tried the line and failed to gain as the Tech secondary was drawn in tighter than Tennessee's hold on the conference crown. So it was second and still four to go. Kimsey figured wisely that not even Frankie could rip through the line for the remaining four yards—the hardest on the football field to gain.

So he called a pass. Sinkwich threw it, intended for Jimmy Skipworth. Tech was expecting it and Johnny Bosch and Ralph Plaster had the Georgia end pretty well covered. The pass was out of reach and fell incomplete, making it third down and still the same four yards to go.

Now, Tech was on the alert. The Yellow Jackets expected a pass or some trick play, perhaps an end around. They were expecting the Bulldogs to play their ace if they had one.

So Kimsey did an unusual thing. He called for exactly the same play which had failed on the previous down. It caught Tech flat-footed. The Jackets were expecting a pass and when the receivers came into the end zone they thought it was one thrown from the same pattern as the first, but to a different receiver.

Sinkwich shot the ball to Skipworth, who took it with ease. And he stood practically in the exact spot where he missed the first one.

It was smart quarterbacking A-plus in his grades. It was a bit daring because if Tech had figured it out it may have cost the Bulldogs their game-winning touchdown. But it was thrilling to see it done.

Leo Costa is the talk of Athens. The home town boy has really made good in a big way. His accurate placements gave his team victories over Tech and Auburn and a tie with Kentucky.

Paul Kluk is also coming in for his share of the praise. He made a great catch in the end zone for one touchdown and his fine pass defensive work saved the Bulldogs several times. He is a big boy and fast enough to become a great blocking back.

George Poschner was hurt in the game and probably will miss the Bulldogs' final game with Miami Friday night. Which will leave the left end duties up to big Carl Grate and Tommy Malone.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(AP)—Ace Parker whipped touchdown passes of 25 and 44 yards to Banks McFadden and Dick Cassiano to drive the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 14-6 victory over the Giants before a crowd of 55,000 in the Polo Grounds today.

Rome Hi Band To Strut Stuff At Bear-Tech Go

ROME, Ga., Dec. 1.—After helping to draw large crowds at local football games this season, the Rome High school band and drill teams will go "big time" on December 28, furnishing the music and between-the-halves entertainment for the Georgia Tech-California game in Atlanta.

Coach W. A. Alexander, of Tech, has invited the Rome band to be the only musical organization parading for the annual post-Christmas game, and local school officials enthusiastically accepted the invitation for the youngsters to be Coach Alexander's guests.

The Tech band will be vacationing for the Christmas holidays, and the Californians will not bring a band, so the Rome majorettes can strut all over Grant field without competition.

In the meantime, while the band and drill teams continue post-season practice, a committee from the Rome Chamber of Commerce, including Van Enloe, chairman; T. Harley Harper and Oscar Borochoff, launched a drive to raise funds for transportation and insurance for the band trip.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 1.—(AP)—Two ace backs, one from the north and the other from the south, were signed today by the Blue and Gray Association to compete in Montgomery's third college all-star gridiron game here December 28.

Acceptances were announced from Owen Goodnight, 200-pound Hardin-Simmons triple threat, and Nick Basca, Villanova running and passing star.

Goodnight plays fullback and wingback on the Hardin-Simmons club and does most of the punting and passing for his team.

Vols To Rest Three Weeks, Says Neyland

Tennessee Won't Appear in New Orleans Until Day of Game.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 1.—(AP)—Tennessee's undefeated and untied Volunteers will be given a three-week rest before starting preparation for the Sugar Bowl game with Boston College on New Year's Day, Major Bob Neyland said today.

Neyland made the announcement shortly after the Vols had returned from Nashville, where they won undisputed claim to the Southeastern Conference championship Saturday by defeating Vanderbilt, 20 to 0, on a muddy gridiron.

Major Neyland also said the Vols would not make their appearance in New Orleans until the day of the game with the Eagles. The Vol skipper said his squad would leave Knoxville "Christmas or the day after for a training site between Biloxi and Gulfport, Mississippi."

The Vol squad will consist of 35 players. Supporters of the Volunteers today started making tickler reservations for the Sugar Bowl game. Tickets will go on sale here Monday morning. Tickets also will be on sale in Memphis, Nashville and Chattanooga.

"We expect at least 10,000 East Tennesseans to be in New Orleans for the game," Major Neyland said.

WALTHOUR LEAGUE.
The second round of play in the strong Walthour Basketball League will be staged Wednesday night at Fulton High with Dixietel and T. D. Cooper's Sears & Roebuck quietly whooping in what should be the feature contest. Both teams scored victories in last week's opener. Billy Cartwright, Sears' brilliant little forward, is the big gun in last week and is expected to give the big Steelman plenty of trouble Wednesday night in a clash which is well distributed among Johnson, Mosley, Mayo, Webb and Jones.

Another surprise club, which last week upset Bob Shippe's Georgia team five, will meet the fast Four Square class in another interesting fray. E. THE BATTLE OF FUMBLES.
After seeing a game like the one which Auburn won from Florida, 20 to 7, Saturday at Columbus, the best thing to do is go off in a quiet corner, ask Elmer Salter, the Plainsmen's spokesman, to send all available data, and put in an afternoon of study.

Everything except the afternoon of study was done. At the last minute, the cramming session was avoided to save confusion. There were 16 fumbles, you know—a record or close to it for a single game.

After the game, Coach Tom Lieb told Romney Wheeler, of the Associated Press, that the "cold weather might have had something to do with the fumbles, on which they lost the ball six times. Yet it certainly did not seem cold enough for that. Tommy Harrison, Florida passing threat, fumbled thrice, Auburn men covering all of them.

Now, Jack, it would be a good idea to come out and take another bow, because Mississippi State has just finished adding Exhibit Z to the evidence.

Whether Pupil McKeen could beat Teacher Bob Neyland's outfit would leave room for argument. Still, that's an argument without an answer.

So let's leave it with another round of applause for Meagher, who was satisfied to get out with a tie after seeing the Maroons in action.

And add another for the manner in which the Plainsmen squelched Florida.

Another angle involves Lloyd Cheatham, star of the game, who played every minute. Cheatham fumbled three times. Before the 12,000 POINSETTIAS—Above is shown a partial view of one of the five big greenhouses of the Mount Nursery, on Rugby street in College Park, filled with more than 20,000 blooming potted plants for the Christmas trade. Here the photographer caught Mrs. Joe Bahin, of College Park, selecting some plants for her holiday decorations.

CA. 1731, will receive immediate attention; or, better still, drive out to this modern nursery and select just what you would like for your Christmas decorations or for a gift to friends.

The Mount Nursery offers a complete floral service for any and all occasions—for banquets, dinners, home decorations, funerals—any occasion in which flowers or floral designs may be required. The nursery covers approximately 25 acres, and is well utilized by Mr. Mount in the growing of shrubbery and plants and flowers of practically all description.

Mr. Mount is a man of long experience in the growing and handling of flowers. For 40 years that has been his business. He was connected many years ago for long periods with some of the leading and outstanding florists in this city and section. For 20 years he has conducted his nursery at College Park, and has built up a large business as the result of his long and practical experience and his courteous and dependable service to the public.

Drive out any day and see the great effusion of blooming plants and flowers at Mount's place on West Rugby street, College Park.

Good Roofs Above All; Some True Facts Given

Roofing is about the only building item that has not followed the upward price trend, but an advance is expected at almost any time; and property owners should take advantage of Ellis Roofing Company's offer to inspect their roofs without cost or obligation. If the roof needs re-covering, they will show you why they make the recommendation and how little it will cost to give you protection for years to come.

An inspection may develop that a new roof can be postponed, but if yours is too old, badly applied or of the wrong type, it will be economical to reroof now, not only to take advantage of the present price, but to save damage to the roof structure and the ceilings, as the expense of these repairs would add to the cost chargeable to the roof.

Too many property owners are misled by low prices, extravagant selling arguments and cheap designs, as well as light felt loaded with fillers. All of these will sound attractive at the time, but a roof is an investment which should last for years, and Ellis Roofing Company offers the genuine Ruberoid material, which is a guarantee of the roofing being made of the proper materials in the right proportions, as the Ruberoid Company made the first

Calvert Iron Works Rushing Out Its Orders

Furnishing Steel for Many Large Commercial, Housing Jobs.

On this page is shown the steel being furnished by Calvert Iron Works, Inc., Atlanta, Ga., in process of erection on the new hangar of the Delta Air Lines at Candler Field. The trusses are delivered by trailer to the job site where two sections are riveted together making a span 150 feet wide. At the highest point these are 50 feet off ground, and require a crane at either end to place in position. These are the longest trusses in the city in the past 50 years.

"Naturally at this time," said Mr. Robert A. Calvert, president of the firm, "there is an increasing demand for hangars both from commercial units as well as defense orders. Some of the most recent orders received were Clarke County Airport, Athens, Ga.; Albany (Ga.) Airport, United States Army Air Corps, Savannah, Ga.; and United States Naval Base at Camp Gordon. In line with the defense program were orders from Camp Savannah at Hinesville, Ga., and mess hall at Fort McPherson, Georgia."

"In the housing field," continued Mr. Calvert, "we have order for the Decatur (Ga.) housing project, as well as the Marietta (Ga.) housing project. Manufacturers are expanding, new grocery stores, food distributors, and many varied industries are making additions and changes. Our order list includes: Atlanta Stove Works warehouse, Tiler Printing Company, East Point, Ga.; Piedmont Cotton Mills, Fulton Bag & Cotton Mills, Atlantic Steel Company, Buckhead (Fulton county) post office, Locust Grove (Ga.) school, Alexander No. 2 school at Macon, Ga.; West Georgia College at Carrollton, Ga.; gas light plants at Athens and Augusta, Ga.; Walgreen's Drug Store, Buckhead; Lane's Drug Store, Augusta, Ga.; A. & P. Super Market, Edgewood and Bell streets; also another unit in Augusta, Ga.; Piggly Wiggly on Beecher street, Gulf Oil station, Albany, Ga., and Columbus (Ga.) Bank & Trust Co.

"Warehouses of Atlanta Saving Store, also Mion Construction Company, garage of Greyhound Bus Line, Salvation Army building, Sears, Roebuck & Co. stores in Griffin, Macon and Columbus, theater in Lawrenceville, Southern Spring Bed Company, Andersonville (Ga.) National cemetery, S. A. L. blacksmith shop at Howell's Station, Chattahoochee Brick Company, Southern Wood Preserving Company, Southern Natural Gas Company, Ben Hill Station, Swift & Co., Moultrie.

CHUNGKING, China, Dec. 1.—(P)—The Japanese today followed up their part of collaboration with the puppet Nanking government with the first raid on the Chungking area in more than a month. Japanese planes unloaded about 10 bombs on a single objective down the Yangtze river in this capital. Chungking itself was not touched.

The Japanese signed their pact yesterday with Wang Ching-Wei, head of the Nanking government, the central government of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek has offered a reward of 100,000 Chinese dollars ($6,000) for anyone "bringing the arch-traitor to book."

Fruits, Nuts In Abundance At Geo. White's

Big Stand Along Ponce de Leon Ready for Holiday Trade.

Just at this time, when the thoughts of many are of the good things they would like to have—and many will have—for Christmas, particularly fruits and nuts for the holidays, there is no more attractive and popular place along any highway than is the George White fruit stand at 135 Ponce de Leon, near Piedmont avenue.

White's fruit stand is admired by the thousands who pass along, and whose "mouth fairly waters" at the tempting fruits and nuts and condiments displayed. They could not help but notice the great number of bags of sweet Florida oranges, hanging row upon row in front, and the wonderful display under the shed, notice the large, red, juicy apples from Virginia and Washington state; the fine specimens of grapefruit, fresh from Florida, tangerines, and every type of fruit in season.

White's Fruit Stand has grown and spread for yards and yards up and down the street, until now it is one of the largest and most attractive spots along Ponce de Leon.

In addition to fresh fruits of all kinds, there's nuts and raisins and figs and pears and dates, and scores of small packages of sweets for the "sweet tooth." And, if you are thirsty, there's cold apple cider, and soft bottled drinks in many varieties, chief among which is the finest of fruit juices. Oranges, grapefruit and pineapple juice, in sealed air-tight pint bottles, all cool and tempting in a big icebox, are featured at White's Fruit Stand.

All the fruit juices handled come from the C. C. Jones Orange Juice Company, on Culberson street, in West End. There they are taken from the fresh fruit 100 per cent pure—just the natural orange, grapefruit or pineapple juice.

Hunter, Lost In Woods, Cuts Own Throat

Gun Gone, 19-Year-Old Youth Walked in Circles.

CALAIS, Me., Dec. 1.—(P)—A lost hunter was found dead near here last night, his clothing frozen, his throat slashed, and Sheriff Ray Foster said today that the 19-year-old boy had committed suicide.

The sheriff said that by retracing the wanderings of John Mulholland, Princeton, Maine, experienced woodsman in a party of 50 discovered that:

Going into the woods near Musquash lake on Friday, Mulholland had lost himself and had crossed and recrossed Flipper brook which, had he followed it, would have led him to Musquash stream and the Grand lake highway.

Mulholland lost his rifle and had no way of signaling for help. His matches soaked, he was unable to light a fire. As his confusion grew, he traveled in circles. Apparently crazed by the thought of freezing to death, the sheriff concluded, the youth drew his hunting knife and cut his throat.

2 Cutters Speed To Aid Freighter

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(P)—The coast guard said today that two cutters had been directed to proceed from Norfolk, Va., to the assistance of the Spanish freighter Motomar, in distress 500 miles east of Cape Charles, Va.

The 5,724-ton ship sent an SOS call at 8:50 a. m. (Atlanta time). In later messages the vessel reported she was unable to navigate because her compressors were damaged.

'Racket' Film Is Now Playing At the Atlanta

Slap-Happy Histrionics Highlighted Day in Production.

Slap-happy histrionics highlighted a day's action during production of Universal's "Big Town Czar," which opened yesterday at Atlanta theater. Barton MacLane, Tom Brown, Eve Arden, Ed Sullivan, Frank Jenks, Jack LaRue and Walter Woolf King are featured.

The slaps were pitched by MacLane and caught by Clyde Dison, character actor. The scene called for MacLane, as a big-shot racketeer, to take over a policy racket operated by Dison in New York's Harlem.

Director Arthur Lubin proved a stickler in the art of the slap. Although, MacLane naturally pulled his punches, Dison's face grew redder and redder with each rehearsal of the scene.

Finally, Dison pointed out to Lubin that he was instinctively anticipating the slap.

"Yeah, and I'm getting tired of hitting him," said MacLane.

It was Oscar Polk, Negro actor standing twenty feet away on the sidelines, who testified that the final blow was okay.

"That was a good slap," Polk said. "It even scared me!"

Workers Take 28 Bodies Out Of Ohio Mine

3 More Are Located; Death Toll To Be 31.

CADIZ, Ohio, Dec. 1.—(P)—The bodies of 27 miners caught in an explosion that rocked the Nelms coal mine were recovered today and three more have been located, George A. Strain, state director of industrial relations, announced tonight.

One body was found yesterday. Officers of the Ohio and Pennsylvania Coal Company, operator of the mine, said the death toll from Friday's blast would be 31.

All the bodies were found in section 12, upward of 1,500 feet from the entrance to the pit, by rescue workers that braved the threat of gas and rock falls.

All the bodies were burned badly and some shattered by the force of the explosion.

Cold and Snow Gripping Large Part of Nation

Temperatures Plunge in Many Cities; One Above in Minneapolis.

By The Associated Press.
Lower temperatures accompanied by snow which reached 15 inches in depth in parts of Wisconsin gripped a large section of the nation Sunday.

Maine and upper New York state reported heavy new snowfall also, although mercury readings in that section were higher.

Temperatures dropped rapidly in Iowa and the Ohio valley. Rain fell in the south and southeast, with colder forecast for the latter region.

Memphis Sunday morning with 39 degrees was 16 degrees colder than on Saturday. Little Rock with 40 was 17 degrees colder, and Oklahoma City with 29 was 19 degrees colder.

Kansas City reported an early morning reading of 19, representing a 20-degree drop over the previous day, while Chicago had 21. Minneapolis reported 1 above zero, 10 degrees under the previous morning reading.

Some of the other low temperatures included Boston 47, New York 50, Albany, N. Y., 43, Syracuse 28, Detroit 26, Pittsburgh 34, Washington 50 and Richmond 46.

British Take 22 Off Brazilian Ship

RIO DE JANEIRO, Dec. 1.—(P)—A British auxiliary cruiser was reported tonight to have halted the Brazilian coastal passenger ship Itape 18 miles off Brazil early today and removed 22 passengers, whom the British called Germans.

It was reported the captain of the Itape protested to the British captain, declaring the vessel was well within the American neutrality zone and was making a coastal run.

Brazilian Ship Detained By British in Trinidad

CARACAS, Venezuela, Dec. 1.—(P)—The newspaper Universal said today the Brazilian ship Baroque, 5,152 tons, was detained in the British island of Trinidad by customs and contraband control officials in order to unload about 60 packages of Brazilian merchandise consigned to such Venezuelan firms as Blohm & Company, Gustavo Zing & Company, and Adolfo Melchert & Company.

The paper said none of these firms was on the list of those with whom the British forbid trade.

Yarnell Talk To Open Series In East Point

South Side Suburban Cities To Sponsor Cultural Events.

Residents of Atlanta's southside suburban cities—East Point, College Park and Hapeville—are growing tired of all the cultural entertainment advantages going to the north side of Atlanta.

And they are prepared to do something about it.

Under the auspices of the Inter-City Civitan Club of these communities and with the co-operation of other civic clubs, Admiral H. E. Yarnell, U. S. N., retired, commander of Uncle Sam's Asiatic fleet during the Panay incident, will deliver a public address at 8 o'clock Friday night in the East Point auditorium.

Far East Topic.

Admiral Yarnell will speak on "The Far East," in which he discusses the relations of this country and the Far East in view of recent diplomatic developments.

His address is the first in which southside cities hope will be the beginning of a series of cultural enterprises for their communities.

"We've been able always to have wrestling matches and the like, but the cultural things in the past have always been on the north side of town," M. G. Paget, chairman of the committee on arrangements, said.

Dobbs Guest of Honor.

Admiral Yarnell will be introduced by Commander Paul Coloney, U. S. N., professor of naval science and tactics at Georgia Tech. Guests of honor will be Lieutenant Commander Harry F. Dobbs, commander of the first naval reserve battalion in Atlanta, which has been ordered ready for active duty, and the entire Atlanta reserve unit, which will sit in a body at the lecture, wearing their uniforms to add color to the occasion.

Paget announced that special school credit is being given all students who attend the lecture.

Defense Chiefs Urge Firms To Spread Orders

Effort Made To Use All Available Machine Tools.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(UP)—Defense chiefs were disclosed tonight to be urging large contractors to spread defense orders among smaller firms in an effort to utilize all available machine tools and facilities to expedite military production.

War Department officials have been telling "prime" contractors—that holding direct army orders—that this policy appears to be the best means of spreading the Government load and accelerating production in view of the bottleneck created by the sudden demand for machine tools to make latest type guns, planes, tanks and other armament.

A survey ordered by Defense Labor Commissioner Sidney Hillman showed, in a report submitted last week, that there were considerable quantities of tools and other facilities lying idle. The report said adequate manpower also is available in these places.

Last-Minute Appeal Postpones Dog's Death

LEAVENWORTH, Kas., Dec. 1.—(P)—Pooch, a five-year-old dog, has been spared—at least temporarily—from execution through a last-minute appeal filed in district court. The dog was ordered shot after 19 witnesses testified in police court that they considered him vicious.

Paul C. Hardman, attorney for Mrs. Mollie Williams, the dog's owner, declared that Pooch had not bitten anyone in the last 18 months and only one of the witnesses had complained to police about the animal. Pooch will wear a muzzle until his appeal comes up in the February term of district court.

EDITOR SUCCEMBS.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Dec. 1.—(P)—Joel H. Bixby, 51, editor and general manager of the Springfield News-Paper, Inc., died of a heart attack today. He was the son of the late Tams Bixby Sr., once prominent in Minnesota Republican politics.

Air Raids Alone Can't Break Resistance, British Declare

Survey Also Shows 66 Per Cent Believe Government Ill-Advised in Concentrating Upon Surface Shelters.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP.
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.
Copyright, 1940

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 1.—Despite the pounding which Adolf Hitler's air force has delivered to British cities in recent months, the average Britisher still thinks Hitler's aerial bombardments alone will never succeed in breaking English resistance.

In London, in the midland cities and in other parts of the embattled islands, the men and women who have been served an almost daily ration of German bombs take the attitude: "The bombs are no joke, but he's got to show us a lot more than we've seen yet, if he wants to win."

The "he" invariably refers to Adolf Hitler.

To see how British confidence was standing up under the German aerial blitzkrieg, the British Institute of Public Opinion has asked civilians in all parts of the country: "From what you have experienced or read or heard about during the past few weeks, do you think it is possible or impossible for Germany to win the war by air attack alone on this country?"

Possible 66%
Not Possible 14%
Undecided or No Opinion 20%

The British Institute, an affiliate of the American Institute of Public Opinion, uses some 200 interviewers—mostly women and men over military age.

While the surveys have shown a mounting regard among Britons for Prime Minister Winston Churchill, they have sometimes also revealed sharp public criticism of individual government policies.

A good example of this is a study just completed on the question of deeper air-raid shelters. The government's policy, which has been defended in the press and in the house of commons, has been to emphasize the construction of surface shelters of brick, concrete and steel which have proved good protection against bomb splinters, but which have not stood up against direct hits.

Recently the British Institute asked: "Do you think the government has been wise or unwise in favoring the building of surface shelters rather than underground shelters?"

Sixty-six per cent of those interviewed thought the government had been ill-advised in concentrating on surface shelters, 15 per cent did not object to such shelters, and the remaining 19 per cent said they had no definite opinions.

'James' Movie Plays at Euclid

"The Return of Frank James" is now playing at the Euclid theater for a three-day engagement. Filmed in technicolor, this exciting and stirring climax to the daring exploits of the world's most famous outlaws is a successor to last year's "Jesse James."

Henry Fonda, who created the part of Frank James, Jesse's grim older brother, is cast in the title role. Others featured in the cast who also appeared in "Jesse James" include Henry Hull, John Carradine and Donald Meek. The cast is completed by Gene Tierney and Jackie Cooper, who are also featured.

The Business Opportunity column in the Want Ads of The Constitution furnishes a fertile field for small investment and profitable effort.

There is a Secret City...

There is a secret city in everyone's heart where Christmas really reigns... that hearth where childhood's golden flame still burns... that temple where a little girl's first doll is enshrined, where a boy's first dog still wags an ecstatic tail.

There is a secret city where each man hoards the memory of Christmas morning before the sun was up, the feel of cold floors against bare, eager feet, the thrilling knowledge that no one else had awakened, that first breath-snatching glimpse of Santa's untiring answer to a little-boy heart's desire—a bike!—blinding vision of fireman's red and pirate's silver!

There is a similar enchanted metropolis in the heart of every woman... a sparkling memory of the city of Childhood among whose "cloud capp'd towers and gorgeous palaces" she was fairy princess... the rainbow-colored glory of her first Christmas tree, glistening with gifts, and flashing, fragile ornaments reflecting the fire on whose flames Santa must have ridden up the chimney!

Boy or girl, man or woman, son or daughter, father or mother,—Christmas is always alive... the Sacred center of all our dreams, the shimmering city of white snow, where the stars never go out or fall, where bells ring only happy melodies... This secret city belongs to children—to you, who are having your first never-to-be-forgotten Christmas—and to us, who are reliving ours, drinking deep of the vision we shall see shining in your eyes on that magic morning! Let us light its avenues this Christmas of 1940 as never before!

Mary Martin Complains Her Husband Is a Stranger

By Sheilah Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 1.—Mary Martin timidly touched Jack Benny's arm. "Will you do me a favor?" she asked him.

"Sure—if I can," said Benny. "You see that man over there?"

Mary pointed to a dark, good-looking male of about 34.

"Richard Halliday?" queried Benny.

"Yes," said Mary, adding, "I'd like to meet him."

"That's easy—just go over and mention my name."

Mary omitted to remind Mr. Benny that she had been married to Mr. Halliday for all of six months.

"But I still don't know Richard," she assures me during a hectic lunch between picture shots. "It's the most topsy-turvy marriage you ever heard of. But I love it."

The most difficult chore of Mary's present life is to get a date with her husband. "He's asleep when I get up (at 6 a. m.) And I'm asleep when he gets back from his agency business (9:30 p. m.) On Sundays I have to pose for publicity pictures, and sometimes do a radio show in addition to my regular radio rehearsals on Wednesdays for my Thursday evening broadcast. I honestly haven't had a moment with Richard since our elopement—except for the two weeks' honeymoon we had on a boat two months ago."

"But even then I had to come ashore four times for two broadcasts, and we discussed my work and Richard's work all the time."

Once in the middle of reading a book Halliday said to his bride, "Excuse me, I've got to go ashore for a minute."

"He was gone two hours," states Miss Martin, "during which period he telephoned New York, talked with the publisher of the book, and bought the movie rights."

IT'S HARD TO GET HER TO DISCUSS CAREER

It's hard work bringing Mary back to the subject of herself and her career. She would much rather talk about her husband and of how he wrote a book at 17. "He was an infant prodigy," Mary insists. He had a screen test at 17, but refused to be an actor. Mary and he had been alone only once when he asked her to marry him, and she said "yes" right away. But I finally do bring the conversation to Mary, the career girl, as opposed to Mary in love with Halliday.

"When Paramount signed me to a contract a year and a half ago," Mary tells me, "I insisted on the clause: Two pictures a year only and six months off to return to the stage." She laughs, and something tells me we are returning to the subject of Mr. Halliday. "I've made four pictures this year, and I will not go back to the stage, because Richard has to stay in Hollywood, and even though I don't see him much, I like to live in the same town with him."

As you can gather from Miss Martin's conversation, she is in a highly excitable state. This is as much due to overwork as to being in love. "I still don't know what my picture 'Love Thy Neighbor' with Jack Benny and Fred Allen was about," she tells me.

"I'm not surprised. The last time was on that set, Mary was being yanked to the roof with a large hook in her dress. 'I didn't like 'Rhythm on the River,' she continues. "And I can't understand why it was a success." (Hey, Mary! You are not supposed to be so honest!)

I think her hatred of the picture is the result of a series of accidents at the open-air preview at Mt. Monte. A fierce wind was blowing at the time, and the screen pole on the apparatus of a distorted mirror. And the sudden roar of a train engine in the middle of a love scene didn't help matters. Neither did Bing Crosby's wife, Dixie, who was sitting next to Mary and didn't recognize her in the darkness. "She pinched my arm and hissed, 'This picture is terrible!'" Miss Martin giggles.

WORKING ON A PICTURE BUT SHE DOESN'T SING

"How about the picture you're doing now?" I asked to change the subject. It's "New York Town." "I don't sing or dance in it, but I think it will be all right," replies Miss Martin. Her immediate text is "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" with Don Ameche. "I sing in that one," But Mary has a yen for something dramatic. "It's too good to talk about. But I'm hoping for a big part in Cecil B. de Mille's 'The Sign of the Cross'."

Her real film ambition, however, is to do a western. Most actresses fight not to do a sagebrush epic. But Mary comes from the wide open spaces of Texas, and she looks good on a horse.

Some personal data. . . . Mary is the scale at 110 pounds—a size of 10 since her marriage. She looks like a combination Jean Arthur-Claudette Colbert. . . . Her hair is currently blond. "I insisted on my own color (chestnut) or the two last pictures, and it came out a drab black. So now I'm letting the studio decide what's good for me."

She has a child by her first marriage—Larry, aged 7, who attends the Black Foxe Military school and lives with his grandmother, Mrs. Preston Martin, in West Los Angeles. . . . Mary and her husband Richard bought and furnished a house in Bel-Air.

"There's no pool," says Mary, then, looking furtively around, she adds, "and it isn't a bit like Hollywood home." . . . Mary could rival Barbara Stanwyck as a coffee drinker—which perhaps why she suffers from insomnia. Before signing off, I ought to record that every person in Hollywood who knows Miss Martin has only nice words to say on the subject. This is most unusual—in Hollywood.

A black felt breton hat trimmed in leopard skin, with bag to match, has been designed by Lilly Dache to match this lovely skin, enhanced by a time-saving cream rouge.

A Cream Rouge That Saves Labor

By Winifred Ware.

Many girls and women would be availing themselves of the smooth and lasting makeup that cream rouge affords but these have not been able to get cream rouge on the cheeks easily. "I can't use it," I've heard them say, "I've tried and I can't get it to go on right."

It is perfectly true that cream rouges require a bit more skill in applying, that they must be, for best results, put on over a powder foundation while the foundation still is a bit moist. And in putting on a cream rouge a lightness of touch is essential—there must not be too much rubbing and working with it, the fewer the strokes in applying it the better.

For those who have had trouble with cream rouge and have abandoned the idea because of the trouble, we have good news. A certain cosmetic line has just produced a new cream rouge which is creamier than most and goes on much more easily. It is an old and reliable cosmetic house and their improved cream rouge surely will please you. It is so creamy the makers of it say it can be applied without a powder foundation, but no one really recommends that rouge or powder be applied regularly without the protection to your skin pores of a foundation cream or lotion.

I cannot overlook an opportunity to urge you to blend in your rouge so that it seems to be a natural flush in your cheeks, as contrasted with the glowing "spots" one sees on some faces. How much rouge one uses is, of course, a matter of personal taste. But really smart-looking women use only enough to get a healthy look, never enough for one to be aware of the fact that they are wearing rouge.

You'll have no trouble in skillfully applying this new cream rouge, which comes in cunning little pots, in three shades dark, medium and light.

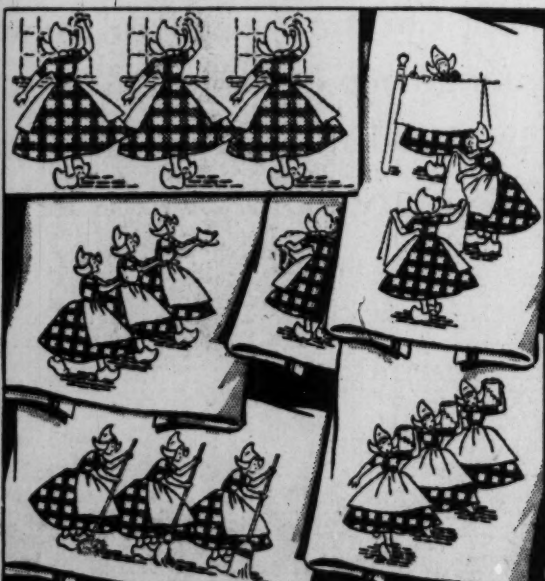

For the name of it and where it can be obtained write Winifred Ware, fashion editor of The Constitution, enclosing a self-addressed envelope if you live out of town. If you live in town phone me at Walnut 6565.

MY DAY: Contribution Is Made To Inter-Racial Study

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Friday.—During this past week a most interesting biracial conference has been going on at Hampton Institute. Dr. Malcolm B. MacLean is evidently starting in with the determination of improving interracial understanding wherever it is possible to do so. In this conference, where 200 prominent authorities in 11 different fields discussed the Negro and his relation to total defense, a real contribution, I am sure, has been made. It should lead to a better understanding of the racial problems in the United States, and in particular to a readjustment of these problems as they relate to our present situation.

I am becoming more and more aware of the contributions to our culture by so many Negro artists. Last night our group of us went to see and hear Ethel Waters in "Cabin in the Sky." We spent a delightful evening. The play is light and amusing, the music is charming and there are one or two songs she sings which haunt you afterwards. It is true that this play does not give her the opportunity for tragic, dramatic expression, such as "Mamba's Daughters" gave her, but perhaps we need not be stirred to the depths of our souls all the time in these days when reading a newspaper is enough to do that.

My only regret was that I did not feel that there was any song which Todd Duncan sang that could touch the ones in "Porgy and Bess." I like him and I think he has such a very fine voice, that I was disappointed not to carry away something with me I could not forget.

I was very glad to have a talk yesterday afternoon with Mr. Edwin R. Embree and to hear a little more about the work of the Rosenwald Foundation. I think I am going to learn a great deal more than I have known in the past about a number of things in the south which interest me very much.

I was fortunate enough to corral Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hemingway for lunch with me yesterday. I only wish that hours, when you are with people you enjoy seeing, did not pass so quickly! Midnight saw us getting on the train for Washington, and we arrived this morning under gray skies. But once in the house, everything seemed happy and full of warmth. Even the President's little scottie dashed into the room while we were at breakfast and his whole body practically wriggled in his effort to express his welcome.

THE WOMAN'S QUIZ

Q. How can cheese be kept from drying in the refrigerator?
A. Cover the cut side with waxed paper and wrap the cheese in a damp cloth, replacing it with a clean cloth every two or three days.

Q. To what extent should vegetables constitute the daily diet of a family?
A. Everyone should have four or more servings of vegetables and fruit.

Q. How can I remove garlic odor from my hands?
A. Rub them thoroughly with celery tops. If these are not available, rub with a little soda and vinegar and wash in warm, soapy water.

Q. Who invented Graham bread?
A. Sylvester Graham, in 1847. Bakers objected to the new product and staged protesting riots in which Graham's life was threatened.

Q. Give an example of the Rule of Eleven in contract bridge.
A. If a player leads the fourth highest card of a suit, for example, the 6 of Hearts, his partner should subtract 6 from the figure 11. The remainder is always the number of cards held by the three players other than the leader, which is higher than the card led. Thus, leader's partner knows that he, the dummy and the declarer hold between them five hearts higher than the 6 spot.

Have you a household problem to solve? Write your question clearly, sign your name and address, inclose a 3-cent postage stamp and mail to The Woman's Editor of The Constitution, 1013 Thirteenth street, Washington, D. C., for a personal reply. Don't telephone; write as directed.

She Lost 60 Pounds and 10 Years

By Ida Jean Kain.

No woman wants to look older than she is! On the contrary, it is rather nice to be mistaken for a few years younger. Therefore, all of you will be more than casually interested in the story of the woman who reduced and lost 10 years! She is a Detroit, and she says:

"I am 45 years old—and eight months ago I looked 55. But since then, with the help of your exercises and the 'Twenty-One-Day Diet' I have lost 60 pounds and look at least 10 years younger. I lost 20 pounds on the diet and the balance merely my sticking to my slimming food habits."

"By the way, I am only five feet one inch tall—and I weighed 240 pounds! I am still going down and hope to reach 140 pounds by Easter, 1941. I am not losing quite as fast now; only about one pound a week. I am feeling fine. I do lots of walking and all the work of a ten-room house."

"Here are the changes in my weight and measurements—"

"March 4: Weight 240, bust 50, waist 49, hips 50; October 18: Weight 180, bust 43, waist 38, hips 41."

"My husband is so happy over my loss of weight. And my 18-year-old son is very proud of his mom, as he calls me."

Well, I'm proud of her, too. It really takes courage and determination for anyone who is just a whiff over five feet tall to reduce so much weight. Only those of you who are about the same height—and overweight—can appreciate how much "character" it takes. But this reducer seems to have the necessary fortitude and I am sure she will reach her goal on schedule. And with her common sense program, her health will improve for the loss of that 100 pounds.

There is no danger in taking off weight—even such an unusual amount—when the diet provides all the materials needed for the wear and tear of every-day living, for then only the stored fat is drawn upon.

I have another report from an Oklahoman—in fact, one report and one inquiry. The first states that: "I have been following your 'Twenty-One-Day Diet' and exercises now for 15 days, and with marvelous results. I have lost exactly 13 1/2 pounds and want you to know that I feel like a million!"

But just wait a minute, mister! The "Twenty-One-Day Diet" is too low in calories for you. You should be on the "Man-size Reducing Menus" and having 1,500 calories a day instead of only 1,000. That first speedy loss of 13 pounds shouldn't harm your health, but the pace is too strenuous to be kept up. A much safer average is two pounds each week.

The other Oklahoman wants to know if it's "on the level about the man who lost 85 pounds and took ten inches off his beltline." It is! And he goes on to say that he weighs 260 pounds and has a 46-inch beltline, and wants to see some quick action in getting down to 170 pounds. Well, let's see. He is five feet, ten and a half inches tall, and that weight would be about right. He can lose that 90 pounds at an average of eight pounds per month—which is probably faster than he put them on. And the way to do it is to follow the "Man-size Reducing Menus" and to back the diet up with exercise for the beltline. With that amount of excess weight, exercise should be started very gradually and never overdone. I am sure we shall expect to hear more from this reducer, and that we won't be disappointed.

YOU CAN EAT CANDY THAT HELPS YOU REDUCE

Since slenderness became fashionable many plans for dieting and exercise have been introduced to help the chubby and the stout with their figure problems.

The latest plan instead of forbidding sweets, offers the reducer a piece of candy before each meal. The candy, of course, is not the regular kind, but a delicious sweet made of healthful, but non-fattening ingredients, including powdered carrots, egg yolk, milk solids and vitamins. It does not contain any drugs, and its effectiveness is due primarily to the fact that this candy, one piece eaten before each meal, helps to satisfy hunger, thus curbing the appetite for rich, fattening foods. If you want to know where to get it, phone or write The Constitution, Fashions Department.

Women who need to lose weight can do it on the "Twenty-One-Day Diet," backed up with the necessary exercises. Men should follow the "Man-size Reducing Menus"—and usually the exercises in "Waistlines and Beltlines." Send large stamped return envelope for this material to Ida Jean Kain, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

Some Tips on Protecting That Vital Body Junction

By Dr. William Brady.

The sacrum or base on which the weight of the spinal column and shoulders, arms and head is carried is wedge-shaped with its wide base upward. It is joined on either side to the wings of the innominate or hip bones, thus entering into formation of the pelvic girdle.

Formerly we did not consider the junction of sacrum and hip bone a true joint—we thought it was a rigid union which permitted no movement. But first the osteopaths and then Joel Goldthwait showed the sacro-iliac junction not only permits some movement, particularly in women, but is subject to all of the disabilities of true joints, such as strain, sprain, partial dislocation (subluxation), complete dislocation, inflammation (arthritis).

Strain or sprain of the sacro-iliac junction (or joint, if you will) occurs usually when the individual leans over and lifts, pulls or pushes something heavy. Sudden "crick" in the back that holds the victim in the cramped position is the typical manifestation of the subluxation. Sometimes, however, the pain is felt down one leg, and indeed has been mistaken for sciatica in many instances.

The pain of sacro-iliac strain or sprain is worse at night, when recumbency brings greater tension on the sacro-iliac ligaments, but may be relieved more or less by change of position, especially by lying prone, that is, on the belly, if the sufferer can get into that position or can be turned over by attendant.

The pain and disability of sacro-iliac strain is more marked in women at the menstrual periods, because the junctions are more relaxed at that time. It is more likely to occur during pregnancy for the same reason. A precaution which everyone should bear in mind, women particularly, is that lifting should be done rather with the legs and thighs, while the back is held rigid and erect. That is, don't bend over to lift, but squat down.

Prolonged sitting, especially in slouched or slumped posture, makes the pain worse. Volumes have been written about chairs or other seats and posture. We're talking about sacro-iliac strain now. Here suffice to say that a common fault is lack of suitable support to the hollow of the back in sitting or reclining.

Calory Tricks Aid Beauty

"Just a tiny piece!" cautions Mrs. Stout. She is trying so hard to get slim—taking small helpings, turning down "seconds."

If Mrs. Stout isn't sure that the way to reduce is to cut fattening calories, not portions! Yes, you can lose as much as 10 pounds in 5 weeks and still eat satisfying, healthful meals.

For foods vary in calory content; to be youthfully slim again just avoid the high-calory ones and make the low-calory dishes your mainstay.

One modest slice of coconut custard pie, for instance, has 470 calories. But there are only 300 in this appetizing luncheon of green peppers stuffed with mushrooms (100), 1/2 cup baked Hubbard squash with butter (100), a slice of applesauce cake (100)!

On such tasty dishes you can safely cut your daily calory intake to 1,200 for a while—fewer than you normally use—and so melt our fat away. A simple feat, with a calory chart showing which food is which!

You see that cream of tomato soup has 269 calories a cup; creamed chicken 200 a half-cup; stewed dried lima beans 300 a cup. So you choose clear tomato soup, 100 a cup; 2 slices of chicken, 67; string beans, 42 a cup.

And you find that your low-calory diet has plenty of healthful protective foods—such as eggs, fruits, milk. As you see yourself getting slimmer, you also see your eyes growing brighter, your skin clearer and firmer.

Wear size 16 again! A complete weight reducing program, easy and pleasant to follow, is given in our 40-page booklet, "Change Your Weight for Beauty's Sake." Has menus for 42 low-calory meals, recipes for low-calory desserts. Gives a three-day liquid diet to start your reducing. Tells how to gain, too.

Purely Personal Chatter About Atlanta Debutantes

(Editor's Note: This is the twelfth of a series of articles appearing every Monday and giving intimate glimpses concerning Atlanta debutantes. The Sally Forth articles will continue through the autumn and winter until the debutante season closes.)

By Sally Forth.

... MARY LIB BEERS, popular debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Beers, is one of the most versatile buds of the season. Blonde and vivacious, Mary Lib is particularly interested in athletics, and lists among her favorite sports skiing, tobogganing and ice skating, which she learned while attending school in New England. The attractive debutante is a graduate of Washington Seminary, where she was a member of the Pi Pi sorority and the exclusive Pirates Club. She was also a member of the Seminary Girls' Circle for Tallulah Falls school and during her senior year served as a member of the May court. Upon completing her studies at the seminary, Mary Lib attended Bradford Junior College in Bradford, Mass., where she graduated last June.

She spends every summer with her parents at their attractive summer home in Wilton, Conn. Here Mary Lib has a grand time riding and playing badminton with members of Wilton's young social contingent.

The lovely belle, who is listed among the city's most popular debuts, was formerly presented to Atlanta society at an elaborate reception at which her mother was hostess on November 5 at their home on Brighton road. Many parties have been given in her honor and during the festive Christmas season she will be honored at an additional round of social affairs.

At the close of the formal debut season Mary Lib plans to leave for New York city, where she will spend several weeks as guest of her aunt, Mrs. M. E. Salisbury, and will be honor guest at a series of informal parties.

Group To Quiz Morgenthau on Loan to China

George Supports Firm Stand in the Far East.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(UP) Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. appears before a joint meeting of congressional banking committees tomorrow to answer isolationist questions on the administration's newly announced plans for $160,000,000 of additional credits to China.

Meanwhile, Chairman George, of the powerful senate foreign relations committee, threw his full support behind the loan policy and called for a "firm stand in the Far East" on the part of this government.

George Consulted.

Morgenthau, according to announced plans, will appear before a joint session of the senate banking and currency committee and the house committee on coinage, weights and measures. He is scheduled to discuss particularly plans to make available to China $50,000,000 from the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund.

George told the United Press he had been consulted concerning the loans before they were announced, and that he approved of them completely. American people, he said, "approve of a firm stand in the Far East."

"We must be governed by two considerations in helping China," he said. "First, we should help them as much as we can without crippling our own defenses. Secondly, we must give aid in the form most helpful to China."

Indicative of Policy.

Congressional circles in general regarded the loans as indicative of continuation—possibly even strengthening—of the strong policies the administration has adhered to on Oriental matters. They noted that the plans were announced almost simultaneously with the denunciation by Secretary of State Cordell Hull of Japan's recognition of the Nan-king regime.

Senator Alva B. Adams, Democrat, Colorado, a member of the banking committee who has frequently criticized administration fiscal and foreign policies, said he planned to question Morgenthau closely on justification for, and implications embodied in, the loan program.

Other senate quarters indicated that Morgenthau also would be interrogated closely on whether the huge stabilization fund is being used as "an instrument of foreign policy."

U. S. Imports Increase During War's First Year

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(AP)—An expansion of raw material purchases caused the United States imports to increase $493,000,000 during the first year of the European war, the tariff commission reported today.

Total imports for the year ended last August were valued at $2,625,000,000, the commission said in an analysis of the effect of the war on imports.

The raw materials accounting for the import increase, the report said, originated primarily in Asia and to a lesser extent in Canada, Latin America, Africa and Oceania (islands in the southern Pacific).

U. S. Loan Called 'Unfriendly' Act To Resume Jobs

SHANGHAI, Dec. 1.—(AP)—Wang Ching-wei's publicity minister, P. S. Lin, declared today that the United States credit of $100,000,000 to the Chungking government was "an unfriendly and unjust reply by a government to the friendly peace concluded between China and Japan."

Japan and the Wang government of Nanking signed treaties of collaboration and "peace" yesterday at Nanking about the time that the White House announced the credit.

The credit, Lin declared, was extended "out of spite and for the sole purpose of enabling Chungking to exhaust China's strength in useless conflict with Japan while simultaneously weakening Japan's position."

President Polk's Crew Registers for Draft

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Dec. 1.—(AP)—The U. S. President Polk docked today after a world cruise and within a short time 70 members of its crew of 170 were registered for selective army service, thus completing registration of American seamen aboard the few remaining larger ships that go to sea.

Joseph C. Keane, member of New York City's selective service board No. 19, said so far 2,800 seamen had been registered in the great harbor of New York and only a few tramp freighters remained to be checked. The President Polk of the American President Lines brought 143 passengers, 57 of them aliens, after a three and a half month cruise, described by Captain W. S. Tyrrell as "uneventful." The liner skirted war zones, he said.

A Story of the American
White-Collar Girl

INSTALMENT I

What a grand guy. Sometimes be used to sneak a slug of whisky in the forenoon, against doctor's orders. "What I like about this daylight saving, you don't have to wait so long for a drink." Once and a while, when I'm fixing in front of the glass I give myself a wink, I can catch just a shadow of that mischief look of his when he took the bottle from the cupboard. He said, "Rum, rheumatism and rebellion" as he felt the stuff warm up his gullets. That wasn't a bad summary of his troubles.

"Pop's rheumatism" was one of the sayings of my childhood. It made things different in lots of ways. Nowadays I guess they'd call it arthritis or sciatica or maybe allergy. Whatever it was I've a notion he earned it. That, and because he worked nights, gave me the feeling as a kid that our house wasn't quite like others. I was ashamed of this but naturally I wouldn't admit it and used it as an excuse for boasting. It was people who worked at night, mother said, were really winning the war, and I passed this on at school. Pop was night foreman at the machine shop, they worked right round the clock in those days making some kind of timers for shells. Backing up Ed, Pop called it. Ed was somewhere in France. After being on the job all night the old man slept until afternoon. To keep me quiet I was allowed to go in the front room where I counted the pleats in the fan paper in the grate or played with the toy snowstorm inside a glass ball. Fine days I was sent out to sit on the stoop. That's the way I first learned females have to be careful sitting on high steps. I guess I made a racket indoors and was shipped out in a hurry. The old man carrier came along. It was big dogs when he brought one of those Y. M. C. A. envelopes from Ed. "Here's a letter from General Pershing," he used to say. This time he found me sitting there. "Hello, sister, you look kind of sorrowful."

"I forgot my Pop was asleep." "I'll tell you something else you forgot," he said. "Your drawers." I ran inside howling with embarrassment. I never could face that nice old postman again without feeling ashamed. Sitting on the steps ties up with something big that happened about the same time. That was the return of the Keystone Division, 1919 I guess. I was eight years old and pop took mother and me downtown to see the parade. Brother Ed was in it and we must have had some kind of pass to let us through the police lines; anyhow we stood at the front of the pavement on South Broad street and watched them go by. I remember the scuff-scuff-scuff of all those heavy boots on the smooth street, and the statue of William Penn high up above. I had that statue mixed up in my mind with God, he was looking the other way and not paying any attention. As a matter of fact he was looking towards Frankford. I didn't notice faces or flags or uniforms I was so thrilled by that rhythm of feet. Then it scared me, it was almost like being hypnotized, the whole street swayed and trembled and I felt sick. Mother was angry at me for crying, and pop lifted me on his shoulder. Afterwards he took us to Dooner's for lunch. Ed joined us there when his company was dismissed and the most exciting thing I could think of was to tell him I had been in disgrace. "Don't you worry, kid," he said. "The girls in France don't worry." Mother was horrified and said she knew the men would be vulgar if they came to Dooner's. They had quite a squawk about it. The old man said "Ed, you can lick the Boches but you can't lick Germantown." Mother came from Germantown which is pretty much the top shelf compared to Frankford. Then we had trouble getting home because the town was full of parades—or maybe I'm thinking of Armistice Day in 1918? Anyhow on account of the crowd the only way we could get down to the street car was to join a procession that was marching along Chestnut street to the State House. Poor mother said she never expected to be found crying in the middle of Chestnut street.

I did the same thing in a dream once! I mean, marching in a procession because I needed to get somewhere in a hurry. That means something special to me. Lots of times you have to pretend to be interested in something you're not really interested in, in order to get where you're going.

Dooner's famous old hotel for men, ladies admitted only in the dining room, was another big name. Pop had been going there ever since he was a young fellow. When he had to give up the machine shop and got a job as night watchman in the Federal building he used to go to Dooner's for breakfast before coming home. Mother resented Dooner's, partly on account of the Kelly Street Businessmen's Association. That was a sort of club of the steady customers; not always so steady either. Kelly street was the little alley alongside the hotel. They had dinners where Pop usually got into some kind of humorous brawl with the Papists, he being Londonderry Protestant. Just calling his heavy overcoat an ulster was enough to start something when they were all in the mood. One time he came home with a black eye; that must have been before I was born, but mother was still talking about it. There was some family joke about it turning both green and orange so at least it was impartial. After mother died Pop said it wasn't much fun to go to Dooner's any more because there wasn't anyone to ride him about it. Then the old place closed up. I remember that because it was a big year for me, 1924. In those talks Pop and I used to have in the back yard he said a funny phrase, the grand climatic. The idea was that 63, seven times nine, is a big turning point in your life. "Sure enough," he said, "I'm 63 and good old Dooner's shuts down on me." I had a little climatic of my own that year which fixed it in my mind.

It wasn't long that that other things shut down on him too. When anything goes wrong with a man he sure lets you hear about it. If they've been athletes, like Pop, I guess they just think of bodies as something to have fun with, until the works begin to go up. They don't realize, the way women have to, it's a damn complicated piece of doings. I don't know the physiology of it, but there was one word that had poor old Pop scared into fits. I used to hear it so often it got familiar without my knowing what it was all about. Somebody gave me a kitten for my birthday and I wanted to name it, so I chose this unusual word which sounded appropriate. When Pop heard me calling it Kitty Catheter he was good and sore.

It was queer something always happened just when we thought the breaks were coming our way. Pop had worked like a dog and he was crazy ambitious for Mac and me. Denny and Ed were so much older there was no use worrying about them. Denny was a grown man earning his living when I was born.

Pop used to say, Denny moved out to Cincinnati and married a sternwheeler. Pop wanted Mac to go to Harvard and then that very year, 1917, came the war. Ten years later he set his heart on me getting a chance. I was out in Manitou then, living with Uncle Elmer and Aunt Hattie. I was all set to stay in Illinois and go through Prairie College, but I just got started when Pop had his trouble and I went back to Philly to take care of him.

The old man and I were mighty close to each other. I guess it was me tagging along so far behind the rest, and then mother dying when I was 10, and the old man being home daytimes. He was good company, I guess it was the Irish in him. Then he'd get what he called his black streak, you could see the darkness come out on his face like he'd swallowed something. "Kitty, get the hell out of here, I got to be by myself."

Myrtle would say, "What's wrong honey, has he gone Irish? You run out on the street and play." Usually I took my jacks out on the front stoop until someone came along and we'd jump hopscotch by the Methodist church.

I know more about it now. I'm never quite sure what I think about things when I'm with someone. Either I'm likely to be putting on an act, or else I'm thinking how much smarter they are than me and I better agree with them. You've got to get back into yourself to chew things over. When Pop was feeling good he'd sing. He had a nice voice, I can drive myself crazy half remembering The Low-Backed Car, or that fool piece The Irish Jubilee. I never said it written down, but I can still hum some of the words the way he used to rattle them off—

Oh a short time ago boys, an Irishman named Dorrity Was elected to the senate by a very large majority, He felt so elated that he went to Dennis Cassidy The owner of a bar-room of a very large capacity.

With the words I can smell a whiff of whisky and tobacco as I climbed in his lap. I didn't like it and often told him so, but anything was worth while to get that song—

Two by three they marched in the dining hall, Young men and old men, and girls that were not men at all. Blind men and deaf men, and men who had their teeth in pawn Soda crackers, fire crackers, limburger cheese with tresses on, and then something about

In came Piper Heidseck and handed him a glass of wine. I hadn't the faintest idea who or what Piper Heidseck was. Years after I found the name on a bottle the first time Wyn and I drank champagne together. It made me cry.

Even so, when the old man's been dead so long, I often think of him. There were things he said that I almost didn't notice at the time. Mother wasn't dead very long when one day Myrtle was hanging out wash on the line. In among his and Mac's big things were some of my pantywaists and nightgowns. He noticed them and said, "I'll be glad when those clothes of yours grow up. It's lonesome washing that don't have a woman's shift among it." Lonesome washing—I think of that sometimes, the other way round. I guess there's a lot of women good and sick of nothing but feminine flimsies coming home in the bundle.

I think of Pop most for the help he might have given me when I needed it. By the time I was ready to ask his advice it was too late.

THEATER—The addition of Fay Wray and Ronald Reagan to the cast of "Knute Rockne—All American" makes the Radio Theater production over WGST 8 o'clock tonight a four-star affair. Pat O'Brien in the title-part and Donald Crisp in a supporting role have already been announced by Cecil B. DeMille who is the producer of the full-hour drama show. Fay Wray is cast as Bonnie Rockne, the wife of the famed Notre Dame coach. Ronald Reagan will be taking the same part he had in the successful movie version of "Knute Rockne—All American." He got outstanding notices from the movie critics for his portrayal of one of the best known players Rockne developed, George Gipp. Rockne used Gipp's name to spur on his later teams to great heights on the gridiron.

CONCERT—A selection from one of Victor Herbert's best-known operettas, "Naughty Marietta," will be sung by Telephone Melton, tenor star of the Telephone Hour, during the broadcast of that program to be heard over WSB at 7 o'clock tonight. Francis White also will be heard as soloist as well as join Melton in a duet performance. The singing stars will be assisted by the symphonic orchestra and chorus under the direction of Donald Voorhes which will perform as the orchestral highlight of the half-hour show, Andalusia from "Andalusia Suite" by Lecuona. The program includes: "I'm Falling in Love With Someone," by Herbert, James Melton, tenor. "Serenade," by Moszkowski, orchestra. "Ouvre Ton Coeur," by Bizet, Francis White, soprano. "Andalusia" from "Andalusia Suite," by Lecuona, orchestra. "Liebestraus," by Liszt, James Melton. "Nora O'Neil," by Hays, chorus. "Best, You Is My Woman," by Gerstwin, duet.

CROOKS—Richard Crooks, distinguished tenor star of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will return to the Monday Concert program during its broadcast to be heard over WSB at 7:30 o'clock tonight after a week's absence due to illness. He will sing Cavardossi's aria, "E Lecevan le Stelle," from Puccini's "Tosca," as the vocal highlight. The symphony orchestra of 70 members, under the direction of Alfred Wallenstein, will accompany the tenor.

QUIZ—Six boys from Georgia Tech and six lovely young ladies from the University of Georgia will engage in a battle of wits during the True or False program which will be broadcast over a nation-wide network from the stage of the Erlanger theater here over WAGA at 7:30 o'clock tonight. Dr. Harry Hagen conducts the quiz. The natural rivalry between the two institutions should provide special interest in the program. The girls representing the University in Athens all rank in the upper 5 per cent of their classes and the lads from Tech represent virtually every form of technical learning.

City Spending To Be Slashed, Study Indicates

City spending will be drastically curtailed and taxpayers and water users will get a break when the administration of Mayor Roy LeCraw takes over January 6, it was indicated yesterday on the basis of budget commission studies.

While a tax reduction appears out of the question at the moment, LeCraw, backed by councilman John A. White, who will be chairman of the 1941 finance committee, are preparing to cut water bills 30 per cent and to turn at least $250,000 a year back to the users, and beginning in 1942 a one-half tax reduction is to be made effective with the expiration of special tax levy to retire the city deficit, amounting to about $1,700,000 in 1937.

Working for more than a week on the budget for the new year, White and B. Graham West, city comptroller, have conferred with department heads, insisting that a "broad water diet" is in store for the government when the water rate reduction is made effective.

Half Million Reduction.
White yesterday said that while the 1940 budget carried expenditures totaling about $10,700,000, the proposed new budget will carry only about $10,200,000, a reduction of approximately half a million dollars.

LeCraw has pointed out that municipal expenditures for 43 divisions for 1940 exceed those of 1935 by $1,300,000, and those of 1937 by $1,262,000, which West and White have prepared, will be submitted formally to the 1940 budget commission at a meeting to be held today.

$300,000 Carryover.
At least $300,000 must be carried over into 1941 from this year's operations if the city is to prepare a budget in line with 1940 expenditures.
Although neither West or White made any definite announcements, it was expected that the city this year will carry forward about $400,000. At the end of 1937, a total of $590,000 was carried over; in 1938, the figure was $435,000, and last year it reached $781,000. The city today will retire about $105,000 on the deficit, leaving $305,000 to be paid in 1941.
